Real Situation Little Changed: Gold Bloc Adamant

BIG LOAN TO CHINA

REPORTED PARLEYS IN LONDON

QUESTION IN THE COMMONS

London, July 6.
According to rumours now in circulation, negotiations for a large loan to China are proceeding in London.

It is indicated that Mr. T. V.
Soong is staying in London for this purpose.

Mr. J. R. Roper, the Conservation member for Macclesfield, is to ask Mr. Neville Chamberlain in the House Commons on Monday if he is aware that Mr. T. V.
Soong is now negotiating with a prominent firm of London bankers for a large loan for China, the proceeds of which may be used for the purchase of goods abroad.

He will also ask if the Chancellor of the Exchequer will make it a condition before sanctioning such a loan that the proceeds should be expended on the purchase of goods in Great Britain.

New York, July 6.
A stock gambling fever is sweeping through the United States, according to the New York Sun.

The Journal states that travellers and brokers with branches in the interior report that the orders taken by stock and commodity firms exceed those of the boom year, 1929.

There is a tremendous activity among Chicago trade brokers and in cotton trading in the south.

Borrowings of the New York Stock Exchange increased by forty-seven per cent. in June, to U.S.$780,386,000 the highest since October, 1931.

6,000,000 shares changed hands today.—Reuter.

WAR ON FENG YU HSIANG

"BANDIT SUPPRESSION CAMPAIGN"

Shanghai, July 7.
The China Press learns from Peking that General Pang Ping-hsun, Commander of the Shansi armies, has been ordered by the Central Government to lead his forces into Chahar and commence a "bandit suppression campaign".

This indicates that the negotiations for an amicable settlement of the Chahar situation are breaking up and that force will be used to suppress General Feng Yu-hsiang.—Reuter.

SUWA MARU TRAGEDY

H.K. PASSENGER DROWNED

INTO SEA

A gloom was cast over the N.Y.K. boat, Suwa Maru, yesterday morning when a second class passenger, Mr. G. H. de Carvalho, of Orient Buildings, 579, Nathan Road, Kowloon, threw himself into the sea and was drowned despite all efforts to save him.

The tragedy occurred about 11 a.m. when deceased walked on to the promenade deck, mounted the rail, and jumped overboard with his arms extended above his head.
A first class passenger who was playing a deck game said: It was all over in a minute. He just threw himself into the sea. I shouted out and threw life belts towards him but of course, he was a hundred yards behind before we could do anything.

LADIES FAINT.

Several lady passengers fainted.
The ship stopped and a small boat was rowed to the spot but they could not find him. I saw Mr. de Carvalho appear once above the water still holding his arms above his head. The man did not want to be saved. They searched for him an hour and then had to give it up.

The dead man boarded the ship at Shanghai and booked for Hongkong where he has some relatives.
A steward on the Suwa Maru, which is commanded by Captain Akiyoshi, said the dead man did not take part in any of the usual games and amusements of the passengers, but spent most of his time alone in the dining saloon.

A MERCHANT.

On the passenger list he was described as a British subject, aged 37, and his occupation was given as a merchant. He was a native of the Colony but had recently spent some time in Shanghai.

It is understood that deceased left no letters which would throw any light on his death.

SURPRISING END TO DEBATE

NEW PROGRAMME TO BE DRAWN UP

LONDON, JULY 6.

CONTRARY TO ALL EXPECTATIONS, THE BUREAU OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFER-ENCE HAS DECIDED THAT THE WORK OF THE CONFERENCE SHALL GO ON.

The decision applies to both the Monetary and Economic Committees, although the gold countries have indicated that they will be unable to participate in the monetary discussions.

The sub-committees have been asked to report upon what work can be discussed with advantage and when these reports are ready, the Bureau will draw up the future agenda.

In effect, the decision means that while the Conference will go on, its work will be considerably restricted in their scope.

MOLEY RESIGNATION DENIAL

London, July 6.
The Bureau, sat almost continuously all day long to consider the present state of the work of the conference.

At the close of the afternoon session a communique was issued stating that the bureau had unanimously adopted the following resolution, presented by its president, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, after consultations with a number of his colleagues.

FIRMLY DETERMINED.

"Whereas the bureau is firmly determined to proceed with the work of the conference to the maximum possible extent and as rapidly as possible, and whereas on account of the circumstances which have recently arisen, the countries on the gold standard find themselves obliged to declare that for the time being it is impossible for them to take part in any discussion of monetary questions, the Bureau agrees unanimously to, firstly, request each sub-committee to meet as soon as possible to draw up the list of questions which can, in these circumstances, be usefully studied by it, secondly, to meet as soon as the reports of the sub-committees have been received in order to make recommendations as to the arrangements which should be made for the further business of the conference."

MEETING ON MONDAY.

The Bureau will meet again on Monday to receive the reports requested from the sub-committees.
It is apparent that Mr. Cordell Hull's eloquent appeal has defeated the gold bloc for the time being.

In the opinion of close observers, however, the real situation remains unchanged and it is obviously impossible for the monetary side of the conference to do useful work in view of the gold bloc abstention.

FUTILE ATTEMPTS.

It must be fairly obvious too that the important Economic subcommittees dealing with tariffs subsidies, for instance, cannot function owing to the insistence of the gold bloc that they would be futile until stabilisation has been achieved.

The only work possible will be in connection with commodities like silver, timber, wine and sugar.

World Economic Conference.
—Reuter and British Wireless.

PROF. MOLEY LEAVES.

Professor Raymond Moley drove by motor-car to Southampton to embark upon the Manhattan together with his adviser, Mr. Swope.

Replying to a question as to whether Professor Moley would resign as soon as he reached Washington, he said "Certainly not.
I do not feel any slight as the result of President Roosevelt's statement."

Mr. Swope emphasised that Professor Moley did not recommend stabilisation. He merely passed on information.—Reuter.

Heavy Suspense

London, July 6.

Never since the opening day has the Conference building been more nominated than this morning when lobbies were congested and crowds of delegates and pressmen were speculating as to what was proceeding in a private meeting of the Bureau which opened at 11 o'clock.

As much ground clearing remains to be accomplished, the suspense may not be definitely lifted until this afternoon.

The outstanding idea at the moment is that a plenary session will be called to-morrow to adjourn the Conference on a definite formula for reassembly within a few months; possibly at Geneva in October.

Further proof that the Conference is as good as over was provided when it became known that the secretariat was preparing to leave Saturday.

Professor Moley and Dr. Swope are leaving to-night, sailing from Plymouth to the United States aboard the a.s. Manhattan.

Sat All Morning.

While anxious groups in the lobbies were discussing and speculating upon the situation, the sixteen countries comprising the Bureau, the Argentine, the United Kingdom, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, the United States and Soviet Russia, deliberated all morning long upon the method of adjourning the Conference.

The matter was discussed in one of the private rooms allotted to the secretariat. No official statement was available by 1 o'clock and the matter was still sitting.

The giant "City of Liverpool" type of plane. Mystery still attaches to the cause of the outbreak which brought the City of Liverpool disaster, and the report of the enquiry will merely serve to revive the stories in circulation at the time that she was deliberately set on fire by one of the occupants.

MYSTERY OF CITY
OF LIVERPOOL

ORIGIN OF FIRE UNKNOWN

London, July 6.

The Air Ministry announces that the accident to the "City of Liverpool" air liner which crashed near Dixmude last March, and of which there were no survivors, has been investigated by the Belgian authorities.

They find that the fire broke out in the central portion of the aero-plane, that the theory that the fire originated from the engines is practically impossible, and that while possible causes could be suggested, these are speculations only and the evidence does not admit of any definite cause being ascribed.

The Inspector of Accidents of the British Air Ministry also finds that on the evidence available it is impossible to reach any conclusion as to the actual origin and the cause of the fire which gave rise to the accident.

It seems clear, however, that none of the engines failed or developed any defect, that the fuel tanks did not burst or spring a leak in the air and that while the pipe lines themselves were virtually destroyed, all the pipe connections, nuts and taps were in order. The electrical accumula-tors had not fired.

The Air Minister is satisfied that nothing could be gained by further enquiry.—British Wireless.

POLICE TRAINING COLLEGE

TO DEAL WITH THE MODERN CRIMINAL

London, July 6.
In the House of Lords, Viscount Hallam moving the second reading of the Metropolitan Police Bill which deals with the recruitment of men to higher posts, and the enlistment of men for short-term service.

His Lordship said in old days the police had to deal largely with the local burglar or thief but under modern civilisation, methods of crime, the opportunity for crime, and the ingenuity of criminals had completely changed.

The measure accordingly provided for the establishment of a police college for training those who were to be recruited for high posts and proposed to recruit 5,000 constables for a period of ten years, other employment being found for the remainder.

INDUSTRIALISED PROVINCE

FEARS POLISH INFLUENCE

Berlin, July 7.

The rural province of East Prussia is to be industrialised on a large scale in a desperate attempt to prevent Polish influence from penetrating the province.

A long story to this effect is contained in the Konigsberg Pro-vinsial Zeitung to-day.

It is stated that Herr Hitler's plan provides for Government cooperation with the leading industries of the Reich, especially in such lines as metals and textiles.

The waterways of the province will be brought up to date to make the best use of export possibilities, while Konigsberg will be made a special source of culture, the university being raised to national rank.

The plan is said to involve breaking up the huge Junker estates and dividing them among the workers.—Reuter.

MITCHELL SHINES

BRILLIANT 68 IN GOLF TOURNEY

A CHALLENGE TO HAGEN

London, July 6.

Hagen's wonderful consistent golf coupled with his magnificent start, has made him a strong favourite in the British Open Golf Championship, which is being played at the Royal and Ancient Club, St. Andrews.

Hagen, who led the field at the end of the first round with a score of 68, was still leading when all the cards for the second round had been turned in.

He displayed very good form, going out in thirty-five and home in thirty-seven.

His lead of two was, however, cut down to one by E. D. Dudley, another American Ryder Cup player, who is offering a formidable challenge to his skipper.

MITCHELL'S EFFORT.

The best golf of the second round, however, was played by Abe Mitchell, the veteran British Ryder Cup player. Mitchell has been looked upon as one of Britain's most brilliant golfers for years past, but his special forte has been match play and he has never yet won the British Open.

To-day, he came into the picture with a magnificent 68.
He provided machine-like golf, getting in tremendous accurate drives to simplify his approach problems—and seldom requiring more than two on any green.

In consequence of this effort, he occupies third place at the end of the second round.

DUNCAN'S TEN!

Leo Diegel, Henry Cotton, Aubrey Boomer, Johnny Farrell, and Craig Wood all showed a great improvement on their form of the previous day.

Sixty-one of the competitors qualified for the final two rounds of the championship.

George Duncan lost his place by an unexpected collapse. He was one under four over the first thirteen holes.

He then took ten strokes before he was able to hole out on the fourteenth!

He pulled himself together and did par figures on the last four holes, but his 78 for the round put him out of the competition, giving him a total of 154.

SARAZEN'S ONE LAPSE.

Gone Sarazen, the holder, looked likely at one time to challenge Hagen for the leadership.
He went out in 88, and seemed well set. At the short eleventh, however, he found trouble at all points and finally took a six. His homeward run cost him forty strokes and he ended up five strokes behind Hagen.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

YOUR CHILDREN

What Children Take For Granted as Necessary They Do Uncomplainingly

By Olive Roberts Barton.

The sooner we learn the word "must" the sooner we accept life without a murmur.

It would be foolish for instance to suppose that one-tenth of us would be educated if we were not "made" to go to school. I never have taken much stock in the pining of the heart for the three "R's," or for a knowledge of maps or battles. Here and there we find a Lincoln or an Edison who would have educated himself if never a book had been written or a school house built, but the yearning for knowledge is absent in most people.

Probably they would grow up to regret not being able to read and write, and perhaps some thousands would make an effort to learn when they discovered what they had missed. But by that time it would be real work to learn. The time of adaptation and quick absorption is childhood.

The Lesson of Acceptance

What children take for granted as necessary, they do. They know they must go to school and with few exceptions off they trot.

However, this is no dissertation on the merits of education, its advantages or disadvantages, or the extent to which it should be carried. Neither is it a discussion of how many children like it, or how many do not, for the fact remains that few children ever set up serious conflicts about school. They say they hate it but they don't actually. The big thing is that they "accept" it and in this very fact we have an enormous lesson.

The lesson is that what children learn to accept as a matter of course in childhood they do—and do it without any serious consequences.

What is true of school is true of home duties, of neatness about themselves, of obedience, of going to bed on time and other regular habits. It certainly is true of work.

Puppets, Not the Goal

We don't wish to make them into mechanical puppets or block off their time by chart. They have no such supervision in school they need a little free-time and play-time out of it. They need, also hours in which they belong to themselves to work but their own ideas, or simply to relax.

But it is obvious that those things they learn must be done, will be done, without too much conflict later on. The habit of acceptance—making up one's mind to endure unpleasant things—grows with the years.

Who is it that suffers the nervous breakdown in maturity? The man or woman who has been taught to face things and do them without a murmur when they were children, or the indulged, lazy, petted ones who never knew what it was to have a responsibility? It answers itself. Too many such children cannot carry on happily and sanely when life's serious problems inevitably face them.

Constant Conflict Harmful

They wear themselves out fighting to get away from them. Each day they have to jump the fence of their own desires and in time it

Get Your Suntan Cautiously

By Alicia Hart

wears them out. Conflict! Conflict with oneself. Trying each day to scare up enough courage to go on—and losing.

Parents will do well, I think, to consider the years-ahead. Will their children know how to meet real responsibility with courage and serene minds in the years to come? If it is to be so then they will have to learn that word "must" by heart before it is too late.

If you go suntan, do remember to take it easy. Get some suntan oil that prevents burning too quickly, which always hurts.

And, until you get your proper shade of suntan, there is a new suntan lotion that you can apply to get the effect that you really will have later in the season. It is a deep, rich suntan in colour, is applied with cotton in a once-over manner to your face, neck, arms and hands. And it makes you look as if you have spent your summer at the beach, before you even start.

For girls who must work in offices when they would much prefer lounging at the beach or in the mountains, this suntan lotion is a boon. It gives you such a vacation-look! And you all know the psychological uplift to yourself and those you see if you can have that look—whether you've had the vacation or not.

Last, but not least, change your make-up to suit your new suntan.

"Ready," she smiled, linking her arm in Kay's. "What is all this?"

Kay looked over her shoulder. "Miss Anstice ran in this morning," she confided. "Guess why she wanted to see me?"

"I couldn't," Monnie said. "Tell me."

Kay paused dramatically, before delivering the bombshell. "She's suggesting me to do her work on the paper while she goes abroad."

"Kay, how splendid! That's because of the way you worked on the school paper."

Kay squeezed her sister's arm. "Exactly. And Mr. Whittingham thinks I'm much too young but she's talking him over. She was going to put your name up because she said she knew you could do it—but—"

"I did help her last winter when she was laid up," Monnie mused. "Oh, Kay, if you get it I can do lots for you!"

"No, you can't," said Kay coolly. "Why not?"

Kay's eyes twinkled with mischief. "You guess, can't you guess?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," Monnie said with impatience.

Kay gave her a little shake. "Miss Anstice's going abroad," she repeated impatiently.

"Well, what on earth has that got to do with me?" Monnie demanded.

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONICA O'DARE helps to support her mother, younger brother and sister by working in a drug store in the small town of Belvedere. Her brother, little, plans to marry ANGIE GIBSON, an orphaned girl, who is the daughter of a wealthy man. Monica is in love with DAN CARDIGAN, whose wealthy parents do not approve of her. SANDRA LA WIECH, not approving of her, the kidnappers prove to be Betty and her cousin, James help Sandra escape.

CHAPTER XXVI

Dan explained slowly, painfully. "It's like this, you see. She's had a shock. She's not—not herself. She keeps calling for me. When she's well enough the doctor says it'll be all right for her to make this trip. And Dad—all the rest of them seem to think I ought to go along. Just," he hastened to add, "to humour her. She's perfectly all right. It was just a bad shock."

"I see," Monnie lifted her eyes, staring out at the fading garden. Dan rushed along. It was not like him to be so garrulous. These fellows, he said, had got away. Sandra was so dazed she couldn't even describe them. They'd been foreigners, though. Hadn't talked much English—not that she could understand, anyway. She had been plucky, hadn't she, to get away from them?

"Very brave," agreed Monnie quietly. Sandra seemed definitely the heroine of the occasion.

"Her father was on his way to put the money where they asked," Dan pursued. "He was just about wild, willing to do anything to get her back. But she wasn't having any of that!" Dan's eyes shone. You could see he admired Sandra's courage.

"Not that I want to go—for a minute," Dan told her later. "It just seems—well—the best thing. You see Mr. Lawrence holds that big loan of Dad's. This is confidential, of course. Dad wants to stand in with him right now. I'd be a pig, wouldn't I, to hold out against him?"

Axain Monnie agreed. The best thing—of course it was merely that, nothing more. No plot to get Dan away from her. She was foolish to imagine that, even for a minute. Such things were done only in old-time melodramas. Besides, weren't she and Dan pledged to each other? This was the end of August—almost September. In January they would be married.

"I'll miss you terribly, every minute," Dan told her on parting. She stood, facing him, her amber eyes darkened with the pain of impending separation. Little bronze tendrils curled about her pearl pale face. "I'll be thinking of you, too, Dan," she told him soberly.

"Well, then—" He was awkwardly trying to tear himself away. "It's early but I've got all that packing to do. We make an early start on Wednesday. I won't be able to see you to-morrow night."

Her heart was like lead. "It doesn't matter."

He put his arms about her. "You're sweet, Monnie, I've known that. My girl!"

"Don't, Dan. Someone might see."

No one must know—no one—their plans for the future. Some jealous fate might intervene.

How big he was, how splendid, Monnie thought, watching him stride down the path. Why was it that, in spite of all his protestations, her heart failed her, went sick and faint when she thought of the impending separation? Nothing would happen. Sandra would find that Dan's heart was sealed against her. It was just bad luck that affairs fell out so Dan had to go to Wyoming with the party.

She went back into the house where Kay sat, mending some flimsy pink garment. Kay looked up seriously.

"That Dan?"

Monnie nodded.

"He left early, didn't he?"

"Yes. He's awfully busy. Going to a dude ranch on Wednesday with the family."

"I read about it in the News," Kay said coolly. She knew then that Sandra was in the party. But she refrained from further comment. Kay went on stitching, humming a little tune under her breath.

Monnie picked up a book and tried to read but her restlessness was acute. A pain beat at the back of her mind like a living thing. She felt sick, envious, discouraged. Sandra had everything and she had nothing. Her job was deadly. Always the same. She could do bigger things, more interesting ones, but because she was the mainstay of the little family she dared not take a chance. She sighed and found Kay watching her.

"Don't you feel well?"

"I have a headache," Monnie said. Heartache was nearer the truth but she would not admit it.

"Take an aspirin when you go to bed," said Kay practically.

Twenty-four hours more and Dan would be speeding westward away from her. She would have his letters, of course, but Dan's letters were never satisfactory. When he was away from her he seemed to vanish completely. Oh, she was a fool, she knew that, to be so apprehensive. What did a month matter? He would be back soon.

"You have the sidgets," Kay observed, threading her needle. "Why don't you toddle off and get some rest?"

"Believe I will."

Kay gazed sternly at the doorway through which she had just passed. "Darn Dan Cardigan, anyway!" she whispered explosively.

They heard the great news about Miss Anstice Cory the following morning. Mrs. O'Dare, reading the Belvedere News, looked up with a little cry of excitement and pleasure.

"Girls, what do you think? Miss Anstice is an heiress! Judge Cory's sister in Boston has left her $50,000."

Monnie, heavy eyed and pale, sipping her coffee, smiled. "How marvellous!"

It made the day seem brighter, this news of something nice happening to someone she knew. Anything might happen if Miss Anstice were to be removed from the scene of her labours, after 20 years of writing Belvedere society notes. It almost helped Monnie to bear the thought that Dan was leaving for Wyoming on the morrow.

Perhaps he would call, Monnie thought. Perhaps he would find time to telephone her—surely, he would. But each time the phone rang and she answered it to find the caller was emphatically not Dan, her heart grew heavier.

Kay flew in at lunch hour, sparklingly pretty, lit by an inner excitement.

"Aren't you off early?" Monnie wanted to know. Usually the two girls at the library made tea or heated soup over a gas ring in the back room and ate their lunch there.

"Just ran over for a second," Kay caroled. "Something important to tell you. Are you leaving now for lunch?"

Monnie washed her hands at the little cracked basin behind the par-

The old Russian Consulate General, Shanghai, seen above from the Garden Bridge, is undergoing a "beauty" treatment these days to make it habitable for its new owners from the U.S.S.R. Both inside and out, the structure is being scoured, refinished, and entirely renovated, a process thoroughly needed after having been empty since 1927 when China severed relations with U.S.S.R. Many tokens of old times were found by investigating workmen when they started operations, and it was also discovered that thieves and house-breakers had been at work. Similar projects are underway in Tientsin, Nanking, and other central Chinese cities to make way for the resumption of Sino-Russian relations.

With the increasing threat of another serious flood in the Hankow area, the authorities have been taking every precaution to prevent the city being inundated to the same extent as during the disastrous floods of 1931. The water reached a dangerous level and feverish operations were undertaken to prevent encroachment over the Bund level. Our photo shows a section of the coolies busily engaged constructing flood walls along the Bund in the Japanese Concession.

More thrills for air-minded China when Lieutenant Vincent, of the Italian Fiat Company, climbs into the cockpit of his Fiat biplane, one of the fastest planes made. He arrived in Shanghai from Italy with his ship, about three weeks ago and is now in Hangchow, demonstrating to the Chinese Aviation officials. Lt. Can won first and second places at the International Air Meet at Zurich in 1932 with a speed record of 270 kilometres per hour. He will be in

The water was close enough to the top of the Bund to give rise to grave fears of serious inundations; but according to latest reports, the river shows no sign of rising.

Woman's Daring Prison Escape

MURDERESS SCALES
15 FT. WALL

Lisbon.
A woman has just made the most daring escape from prison ever recorded in Portugal.

This woman was serving a sentence of 28 years' imprisonment for the murder of her son. She picked the lock of her cell high up in the prison, and opened a window in the corridor.

In preparation for her escape she had managed to make a rope of handkerchiefs, and, using this, she swung herself twelve feet along the wall, and grasped the lightning conductor.

She was still 100 feet above the ground, but she climbed down the lightning conductor to the prison courtyard.

A 15-foot wall still stood between her and freedom—but she scaled that. At the last moment she was seen. The alarm was sounded, and warders rushed out. It was too late. The woman outdistanced her pursuers, and is still at liberty.—Reuter.

CINEMA "SHOTS" & "SEQUENCES,"

DOMESTIC DRAMA WITH A WRONG TWISTGOOD FILM AT KING'S SPOILT BY THE AUTHORM.G.M.'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE CINEMA

THE Cinema's interpretation of domestic drama is invariably interesting often amusing and always tantalising. And the last mentioned is the result of a persistent departure from what, up to a point can be accepted as fairly indicative of a phase of life, into sheer melodrama where common sense, and intelligence gives place to crass stupidity on the part of one or two of the characters. A glaring example is The Painted Woman, current attraction at the King's Theatre.

UP to a certain stage this is real good drama. There is plenty of good acting, snappy action and the promise of a dashed good climax. But instead of allowing the story to progress along normal lines, the author has had to go off at a tangent, introduce an element quite foreign to the earlier theme and finish up with melodrama, where the hero and heroine have no time to listen to sane explanations of a very simple, although delicate, situation. As a result we get an unnecessary trial, an equally unnecessary shooting affair, a death scene and finally a sloppy reunion. It is this reunion, where the characters accept each other on face value simply because of a dying confession, half of which is a lie, and are no nearer the explanation of the cause of their quarrel than prior to the shooting, the trial and the death scene, which makes the latter part of the picture so inconsistent.

PEGGY Shannon is on the rocks and has to make her living in a questionable hotel in Singapore. There she has a scene with a man culminating in her breaking a jug over his head. She prevails on William Boyd to help her to escape on his ship sailing for Australia. On the journey one of the crew is attacked with plague and Peggy is put off on an island off the trade route. There she first meets Irving Pichel a rascally lawyer and Spencer Tracy a go-ahead pecker. She and Tracy marry after Pichel has done his utmost to lure her away. William Boyd returns with his schooner and without knowing each other he and Tracy have a little back-chat in the saloon. Tracy has to visit a neighboring island and Boyd hears he has been double-crossed by Peggy Shannon. So far, so good. In fact the whole thing is put over extremely well. We are led to feel that the climax will be the meeting of Boyd and Tracy in the latter's house and we wait for the moment. We wait in vain. The author prefers another route to the finish. Boyd attempts to kidnap Peggy Shannon and he is stabbed by a faithful servant. Peggy is accused of the crime. Tracy returns to hear a semi-confession of her earlier life and like a true husband, head over heels in love with his wife, decides that she is nothing but a cheat. The servant confesses to the murder, but Tracy refuses even to listen to his wife's story. The servant escapes the gendarmes to explain the position to Tracy and is mortally wounded. An exhausting death scene is followed by that customary old re-union which goes something like this.

The wife: And now my dear I must tell you the true story of my life and how all this happened.

The husband (cutting in): Not a word darling. You are not going to say anything until I have finished telling you, how sorry I am, and that will take me the rest of my life.

Curtain.

But I still think the other ending would have been preferable. A scrap between Tracy and Boyd might not have been quite so dignified as Tracy's exit from the trial court, but it would have been more exciting and certainly in keeping with the earlier atmosphere of the picture.

THERE is some really excellent acting in this picture, although the theme is trite. I have my own private opinion about Hollywood for the manner they exploit such a talented actor as Spencer Tracy, but never mind that. One consolation to his admirers is that no matter the type of vehicle, Tracy is equal to the occasion. He is a brilliant actor. And if given the chance could be an equally successful character player. Peggy Shannon plays cleverly opposite him and first rate supporting work is accomplished by William Boyd, Irving Pichel and Herbert Mundin.

THERE is something attractively novel about the present picture at the Queen's Theatre, 70,000 Witnesses. The title is comparatively irrelevant when the picture is viewed in perspective, but it is not a point to worry about. What appeals, I think, is the effort to introduce a new method of committing murder and the reconstruction of the crime which leads to the unmasking of the murderer. A footballer is rubbed by his college doctor with nitro-glycerine, which, after he has made a long and strenuous run, acts on the brain and causes hemorrhage. The solution to the riddle is provided by the game being played over again with the doctor forced to apply the same "dose" to another player and the final denouement of his act.

IN this picture we have some new ideas quite well presented. Additionally some typical acting by David Landau, some first rate work by Charles Ruggle (once again a drunken reporter) and adequate supporting contributions by Dorothy Jordan, Lew Cody and a host of other players go towards the making of an entertaining film. It relies largely on its dramatic situations any mystery, and if the latter is a bit shallow, the action is sufficiently sustained to overcome the deficiency.

REACTIONS to the picture Lady With a Past, which in England had to be renamed Reputation because the original title was too suggestive! will be varied when it shows at the Central Theatre to-day. If anybody were to protest that the theme is undesirable, the incidents highly coloured to a point of vulgarity, and the whole picture rather a waste of time, Hollywood would probably reply "This is Life, with a capital 'L'; this is a truthful pictorial survey of the lives of thousands of men and women to-day." All of which is undoubtedly true. The only point is, does it help to see some of the nastier truths of life mirrored on the screen? Do we come away from the theatre feeling that we have been entertained? I am not going to attempt to answer the questions here, for as I have said reactions will vary. But whatever one's attitude to the picture, Lady With a Past provides one of those "talking points," so eagerly sought by the late Lord Northcliffe, for his newspapers.

IN this picture we have Constance Bennett as a young society woman, heart-broken because she is unpopular with men. Miss Bennett is then allowed to break nearly every rule of conduct on the ground that the end justifies the means.

Its theme is that no girl can be popular with men unless she has been mixed up in some sort of scandal. In pursuit of this unattractive argument we find that the girl who has every young man in New York at her feet is a widow who is believed to have poisoned her husband. In this rather absurd setting Constance Bennett, in the part of the heroine, ("They called me Venice because Mum and Dad spent their honeymoon there"), appears as the only daughter of the most Pilsen Fatherly blood in New York. The story, which is very long, is told in great detail and with the utmost technical efficiency. The members of a lengthy cast act

theless, I am left with the feeling that this picture should have been called not "Reputation," but

Lillian Harvey and Henry Garat as they appear in the brilliant film "Congress Dances" which comes to the Central Theatre on Sunday.

"Notoriety," or better still, "Have you heard this one?" since the main idea seems to be to prepare the way for individual characters to shoot off a dubious variety of so-called wisecracks.

WILL Rogers strikes a refreshing note in a cinema world where polish and speed are so predominant. He picks his leisurely way through his films provoking chuckles and smiles, rather than boisterous laughter, with his steady flow of dry humour and homely philosophising. Too Busy To Work which is the next change at the King's Theatre shows him in a role which fits him perfectly. He is a tramp, who has made laziness something between a fine art and a virtue, who walks the country-side looking for the man who stole his wife and daughter while he was at the war. He finds them, and finding that they are happy, takes to the road again with his identity unrevealed. The slight plot is a perfect vehicle for the expression of the star's personality. There is a fine supporting cast of players, including Marion Nixon and Dick Powell, but the film begins and ends with Will Rogers. There are incidents in his travels—making vain attempts to catch a rabbit for breakfast, or being forced to give up a free ride on a freight train—which are a sheer delight, so adroitly does he extract a witticism or a moral from bad luck. There is also some side to the tramp's nature, of course, and Will Rogers shows himself an emotional actor as well as a humorist of the first rank. The pleasant country settings, finely photographed, are only one other feature of the many fine things in Too Busy To Work.

WE owe it to M.G.M. for several innovations in the utilising of the screen for bringing before the public educational and amusing features. It was M.G.M. which gave us the series of Sports Champions by which we saw the world's best tennis players, swimmers, golfers and athletes in entertaining and instructive studies. M.G.M. features invariably justify themselves by the very nature of the subject and the quality of the production. And in this direction the latest feather in the caps of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company is the Microscopic Mysteries feature, the first of which were seen in Hongkong this week.

OF course it is no new thing for the cinema to present nature studies, but in the use of microscopic lens to photograph the studies, M.G.M. have, so far as Hollywood is concerned, presented something new. It is within recollection that several years ago Ufa were making a similar type of film and it was this sort of work, which, although it had an educational aspect as its basis was at the same time distinctly experimental, contributed to the fame of the Ufa producing company as pioneers of modern cinematography.

THE study included in the M.G.M. variety programme at the Queen's Theatre this week was a remarkable example of the potentialities of the screen as medium of art and education. No skillfully written scenario or cleverly acted picture has expressed drama better, death struggles of the ant world as revealed through the microscopic lens. Much of the effect was due to the skilful manipulation of the camera, but the grimness of some of the incidents were relieved by some amusing running commentary. Judged by the expressions of opinion I heard afterwards, Hongkong appreciated this new revelation of the screen and further instalments of this feature will be welcomed.

King Luan-kat asked for an explanation of all these things. Bluecoat said, "There are many kinds of sin. It is almost impossible to treat them as of one type. The evil of men proceeds from their evil hearts. It is by the mind that one may increase or reduce his evil."

"It may be that in going about during the day when one is busy, one cannot think over these matters very clearly, but at night when lying in bed, when the mind is settled and the eyes are closed and one contemplates things that cannot be fully recalled, and the feelings that one cannot anticipate, many things strange and wonderful come into the mind, and all kinds of wickedness and villainy also come forth. In fact, most of the evil schemes originate in bed. Then they can be clearly planned and one may begin cheating in secret, and as they develop the plans they may sleep in peace."

"Joy is found in bed and grief also comes to one in bed. It sometimes happens that a husband and wife, pillowmates in bed, set one another on to do evil, and unkind conduct often starts in this way, and dissensions among brethren also commence at such times."

As for the others, they each have their own unclear minds and evil plans, so in their case each is on a separate bed.

But in cases that are alike and where sins are similar, whether they be many or few, they are all placed together in one bed.

REALISATION

Extracts taken from the Report of the Realisation Committee, under the 20th January 1933.

The year has been one of increased activity for the Committee.

Mr. W. D. McLaren, M. Inst. C. E., M.I. Struct. E., M.I.N.A., of Vancouver, well-known forestry expert, made a comprehensive inspection and report on Realisation work of N. Z. Perpetual Forests, Ltd.

TRANSPORT:—Definite recommendations for the internal transportation of raw material and manufactured products, have been adopted by the Committee, and active measures taken to acquire all necessary rights of way for the main transportation line. A contract has been let for the survey and construction of 40 miles of steel track forming the line. This work is being pressed forward.

Definite recommendations were also put forward regarding transportation of manufactured goods from the forests to deep water, for export.

PLANT SITES:—Three definite sites have been decided on. All are located definitely on the main transportation line. The necessary land for these sites has already been acquired and sufficient land adjacent for town and village sites.

COST OF PRODUCTION:—Evidence from expert sources shows that we are favorably placed to produce merchandise for which there is a sustained demand, at competitive prices—with a satisfactory margin of profit.

SAMPLE PLOTS:—These are being established to ascertain the volume of softwoods available at any definite time on the whole of the plantations, and the average rate of growth for any period. The methods adopted are approved by the best expert advice obtainable both in New Zealand and abroad.

FINANCE AND GENERAL:—The policy for financing the conversion of the timber into marketable merchandise is now receiving very careful consideration by the Committee.

The above report deals with the Realisation aspect of N.Z. Perpetual Forests, Ltd., business. It shows the soundness of the investment offered by the Company. For further details address

THE SHING MUN MALARIA

The true position of affairs regarding the outbreak of malaria at Shing Mun is a matter of public interest. If the menace which is present is not removed, the engineers to be responsible for constructing the Gorge Dam will plainly be seriously handicapped and the ultimate cost will be considerably increased. Fortunately, in a way, the danger has early made itself manifest and the active anti-malarial work now being undertaken under the direction of Dr. Jackson, the Government malariologist, and Mr. Bach, an expert with considerable experience of similar problems in Singapore, appears to be sufficiently comprehensive to ensure satisfactory results, although the preventative measures will not reveal their value for some little time. Extensive draining and oiling form the principal features and the success of these efforts will doubtless be judged by the diminution or persistence, as the case may be, of the present outbreak, which appears to have been going on for some time past, although only recently has it become public knowledge, and, consequently, the subject of somewhat startling rumours. Enquiries from various sources resolved these into the information that although the outbreak was serious, the true position could be stated in this wise, that each day over some period of time, from forty to sixty workmen had reported sick and had been compelled to absent themselves as the result of the malaria epidemic, causing a delay in progress, though only slight. Mr. L. W. Innes, the chief assistant to the resident engineer, now writes stating that during June sixty-four cases of malaria were reported and treated, giving an average of two (fresh) cases daily, in several instances these cases including labourers who had suffered an attack of malaria during the earlier part of the month, reporting for further treatment. Mr. Innes desires to correct any impression that may possibly be abroad that scores are being added to the sick list daily. In such circumstances, of course, work would be impossible.

NOTES OF THE DAY

The World Economic Conference suspense is over for the present. Discussions are to go on, though it remains to be seen what good is likely to be achieved. The European gold countries are declining to participate in the work of the monetary committee. Their views on this issue have been crystallised and nothing but a complete volte face will undo the damage of President Roosevelt's initial bluntness. To Mr. Cordell Hull goes the entire credit for saving the Conference. He attacked the attitude of defeatism vigorously and swayed opinion in a brilliantly eloquent speech.

THE BEST POLICY

The circumstances suggest that adjournment of the Conference might still be the better policy. The monetary and the economic problems cannot easily, as President Roosevelt suggests they might, be separated. It seems futile to discuss tariffs, for instance, while high barriers are being automatically erected by the process of currency depreciation. The gold countries may be in a position to discuss economic problems when they are satisfied that the American dollar has reached the bottom. It would be unreasonable to expect them to commit themselves while one of the principle factors in their calculations remains an unknown quantity.

THE U.S. NAVY VOTE

The American Navy Department is asking for $77,000,000 to modernise and raise the gun elevations of its battleships. At a time when the spirit of the world is being influenced towards disarmament and the reduction of militant forces, such a request appears to be peculiarly out of place. The new American naval policy does not seem to be in harmony with the professed desire for reducing the implements of war. Action such as this will do nothing towards restoring the world's confidence in the aim for peace. The reaction in the Pacific is almost bound to be one of disquietude and may even influence Japan to press harder for a revision of the ratio of vessels agreed upon in the London Naval Treaty. The proposed vote may be part of President Roosevelt's scheme to provide employment, yet surely there are a dozen other more desirable channels into which the money could have been diverted to assist in the effort to relieve unemployment.

POLICE BOMBING

Sir Austen Chamberlain's criticism of the British policy regarding air "police" bombing will be widely endorsed. The contention that under certain circumstances and in certain areas aeroplanes carrying bombs of destruction are the most humane instrument because they prevent the spread of trouble is impressive only when divorced from principle. The fact remains that whether the spreading of trouble is, or is not, prevented, an aerial raid on a village, thrusting death upon innocent persons is displaying remarkable inconsistency. We are not forgetful of the necessity of dealing firmly with the periodically hostile tribes which haunt the Northern borders of India, and the deserts of Iraq. But control of these elements must not be at the expense of innocents, still less of the fundamental principle which the British Government professes to support, that the bombing of civilian populations is a crime against humanity.

THAT LOAN STORY

Persistent rumours that Mr. T. V. Soong has been negotiating a loan in London are now brought to a head by a definite assertion that a prominent London firm of bankers are considering the Finance Minister's overtures favourably. Details are necessarily brief and there is, as yet, no assurance that Mr. Kemmerer's authority is unimpeachable. The question being put to Mr. Chamberlain sounds eminently reasonable however, and it may lead to a statement of British policy. The present time would appear hardly suitable for authorising large foreign loans to a country which is already in a difficult position in meeting its obligations.

"A VISIT TO THE INFERNO"

THE FIRST STAGE

CHAPTER IV

As they entered they saw people with heads of cows and faces of horses, who were as cruel as wolves and were beating the sinful spirits, the ghosts of men. The sinners here were tied up with hempen cords, and the demons who punished them had iron rods like pipo lumbos, about four feet long, with which they beat the sinners from head to foot, and after beating them let them down and hung up other sinners whom they beat in the same way. The spirits (ghosts) wept without ceasing, and cried out, "We dare not offend any more," "Do not beat us so much," "Please hit with lighter blows," "We have had enough," and such expressions like children being beaten on the ear. The cattle-headed Hell police said, "You have beaten people a great deal, and it is now our turn to beat you. If you were not beaten you would not know how painful and grievous it is to sinners to be beaten." Some of these sinful spirits were women, most of them had been cruel to slave girls and concubines. Many others were police and cruel people who had extorted money from others. Some, too, were masters who had ill-treated their apprentices, and others teachers who had been cruel to their pupils, and not having a heart of love, they had followed their own evil bent and unjustly punished those under them.

"YOUR HONOUR"

The offenders of different types came in twos. Suddenly a culprit was brought in who was wearing an official hat and official boots, and a long robe, and having a string of beads round his neck. He came stepping forward without any sense of fear.

The lictors took off his clothes and removed his hat and boots, but he kept trying to kick the lictors with his big feet. The lictors were afraid and said, "What is the matter with you? Are you pretending to be mad?" The prisoner said, "You are mad, you do not know how to distinguish one person from another. You bold villains taking off my clothes. Do you want to rob me?"

All the lictors put their hands to their mouths and laughed at him. He said, "Who do you think I am? I have been a magistrate, and have governed the people, and been called a great man (or 'Your Honour'). Do you think there is any comparison between you and me, you robbers?" The lictors said, "You were an official, but now you are an offender, and a criminal." The official said, "What offence have I committed?" and the lictors replied, "A short time ago your case was tried before the King of Hades, and it was said that you oppressed and robbed the people much worse than robbers do. Yet you come here and pretend that you know nothing about it, and that you are silly."

One of them said, "Why do you talk to him so much? It is simply a waste of breath, and absolutely useless. The King of Hades has ordered that he be beaten eight hundred strokes so you must just beat him the full number. Why should there be all this talk about it? If an official has been a bad man, he should be beaten with greater severity. Hang him up."

Now this official was fat, and his skin was white. He was fleshy but his bones were small. After he had been beaten a few strokes he cried aloud to heaven, and said in a loud voice, "I will not claim to have been an official. I prefer to confess to being a robber."

All the lictors broke out into loud laughter, and even women who were hung up near at hand undergoing torture could not refrain from laughing, though it was unintentional.

In this place there was also a very large and spacious shed in which people were hung up here and there. They were not more than five feet apart.

One person would be hung up in a part of the shed and as the lictors beat him wildly with the rods another near at hand would laugh at him.

Some were beaten three hundred strokes, some five hundred, some eight hundred or a thousand, the smallest number was two hundred. Some were men and some women, some old and some young, and as one lot went away another lot came in.

There was an official present marking off their names and punishments in a book, and when they had been beaten he sent them away to report themselves and afterwards they were led to the ruler of Hades, and according to his orders they were released or changed into animals or became men again, or they might be detained for further punishment.

BLUECOAT'S PHILOSOPHY.

At the sides of the place where the official sat, a pair of antithetical scrolls were hanging. The writing was in black characters on a white ground. The sentences were as follows:

(1) Instruct all men about the importance of not doing evil.

(2) Let after death they receive punishment.

Yet people do not believe these words, and here they beg the lower officials to make their punishment light, just as in the world they seek to influence the officials. It is really most difficult to carry out justice as it should be meted out according to the decisions of the higher officials. Ting Lan-kat asked why it is that so many people commit sin.

Bluecoat said, "As heaven and earth are so vast, and men and women are very numerous, think for instance how many people there are in the nine states and eighteen provinces of China. Now in some places the people have good customs and in others bad, and amongst the good there are bad people and amongst the bad there are some good. How can the officials in the world find out all the evil ones and punish them. Even in one small district how many criminals escape punishment?"

"Are there not hundreds and thousands of people who are unfaithful and unbrotherly and unrighteous, failing in their duty to their parents and brothers, and offending against the great principles of love and righteousness?"

"Besides this, the officials when punishing men only judge their actions and do not judge the thoughts of their hearts. But in the other world, when sin is punished, not only are actions judged but the thoughts of the offenders as well."

"Such evils as covetousness, lasciviousness, cruel thoughts, wicked minds, disobedience, envyings and other dispositions which are contrary to the duty of men one to another, even though externally there may be no evidence of these evil thoughts, are all regarded by the spirits as sins that cannot be forgiven." "Although a tiger in the mountains has not yet eaten a human being, those who see it regard it as a wild and ferocious animal. Although there is as yet no human flesh in his mouth, the tiger desires to devour the whole man."

Ting Lan-kat said, "Really, you have a most excellent way of expressing it."

The Very Idea!

WHEN IS WHISKEY
BY EDDIE KELLY, SAY WHEN!

WE noticed in the Telegraph the other day that a great dispute is being waged between British and German distillers over the word whiskey.

When, the Telegraph asked, is whiskey not whiskey? We've waited two days for someone to ask us. Now that we are sure that our opinion is not going to be sought, we are going to give it anyway.

Our association with whiskey dates back to the day when we were hit on the head with a bottle by the old man and told to consider ourselves launched. When we were a baby we were bathed every morning in pure alcohol, the hundreds of interested visitors who came to watch the operation afterwards dipping clay pipes into the tub and blowing soap bubbles.

But this was many years ago, before Australia was half civilised through contact with visiting English cricket teams, and half uncivilised through contact with itself.

In those days, a girl who went petting didn't let fools hug them or hugs fool them, and there were no such things as trains or buses. Everyone had to travel by motor-car.

This is called evolution. A Scotch scientist once predicted that the world, finally, would be managed by big lizards walking on their hind legs; and yet they say that Scotsmen are a comparatively dry race.

Whiskey was invented in Scotland, where the water is said to be the purest in the world. They use the water to wash the glasses in.

That's why Scotland is such a cheap place to live in. It only costs sixpence a nobbler back there.

We had a Scotch friend who was killed by whiskey. He was out fishing for hake one day and dipped the bait in a mug of whiskey before throwing the line overboard.

The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of "death by being hit in the stomach by a hake."

THE NEW SUIT.

"It is about time you bought yourself a new suit; I am sick and tired of seeing you going around like a bottle. It is positively shameful the way you go to the office and, really—I am ashamed to be seen with you in the street. That shabby old suit of yours—"

"But, dear, it is still a good suit," we said. "Thorou says that the man who is always getting new clothes is no better than a clothes horse. Now, you wouldn't like us to be a clothes horse, my dear—"

"I think you are an ass! Your clothes are a disgrace to your firm. Look at the stains. And the trousers are frayed at the cuffs. And the knees are baggy. You will simply have to get a new suit."

It mattered nothing that the car wasn't paid for and that two instalments on the wireless were owing. We had to have that suit and the wife came with us to see that we got it.

While we were getting measured she said that she would run out and buy some shirts and socks. But when we got out to the car there she was—her arms full of parcels.

"Good heavens, woman," we said. "You have bought enough shirts to last us twenty years."

"But they are not all shirts, darling," she answered sweetly. "Not all shirts?"

ing yourself. I have heard statements made about punishment for the evil thoughts of men's minds."

CHAPTER V.

THE SECOND STAGE

He was then taken on to see the second stage, or grade of Hell, and there he saw hundreds of beds laid crosswise.

Some had thorns laid all over the beds and those who were lying on the beds on their backs had large stones pressing on their chests. The hands and feet of those lying on the beds were also bound so that they could not get up nor free themselves at all.

"They were in great pain and groaned day and night without ceasing."

Some of them were on separate beds, in some cases two were in one bed, in some cases there were men only and in other cases women only.

Sometimes there would be one man and one woman, sometimes one man and several women, and occasionally one woman and several men; sometimes there would be a man and a woman, and sometimes a man and a woman and a child.

Even many cases of people in one bed.

but I'm afraid to risk making him believe I'm broke.

ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION IN PLAN

That defendant had misrepresented the true condition of a building was one of the allegations made against Mr. J. S. Gibson, the local architect, when he was summoned before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon on two counts, (1) misrepresenting the true conditions of Nos. 279 and 281 Reclamation Street, which were under reconstruction, and (2) causing material divergence from the plans submitted to and approved by the Building Authorities.

Mr. L. R. Andrewes, Assistant Crown Solicitor, prosecuted, while Mr. M. K. Lo appeared on behalf of the defendant.

Outlining the case, Mr. Andrewes said the construction of these premises was rendered necessary by a fire which occurred on November 16, 1932, and during that fire No. 281 was completely gutted, leaving only the wall standing. No. 279, the adjoining house, was also damaged, and on January 10, 1933, plans were submitted for the reconstruction of these premises and they were signed by Mr. Gibson.

Various other papers were submitted together with the plans in accordance with the Ordinance. The first of these was a stability certificate dated January 9 and signed by Mr. Gibson.

The next relevant document was a form signed by Mr. Gibson and which stated that the plans and calculations submitted to the Building Authorities were prepared under his personal supervision, and that the said plans and calculations conformed in every respect with the reinforced concrete requirements. This document also stated that Mr. Gibson had been engaged to supervise throughout such construction.

When the plans were received by the Building Authorities, they were dealt with in the usual way. After an examination of the plans, notice was sent to Mr. Gibson informing him that certain amendments were required.

Mr. Gibson attended the offices of the Building Authorities, took away the plans and finally made the necessary amendments.

Relied on Statements.

The plans were later again submitted to the Building Authorities, and they were approved on February 3, 1933. It was found that the amended plans conformed with the Ordinance and that was why they were approved. The Building Authorities relied on statements signed by Mr. Gibson, that parts of the old building would be utilised in the reconstruction of the building, and that he considered these portions to be sound enough. The stability certificate also stated that in Mr. Gibson's opinion, these portions would be structurally sound and capable of supporting the weight of the new building to be erected thereon.

It was essential, went on Mr. Andrewes, that these portions of the building must in fact be sound. Otherwise the new building would, to some extent, rest on unsound foundations.

Mr. F. C. Neville, a Government overseer, visited the site and inspected the building. He found that the fire debris had not been cleared away, and he was unable to make a close examination of the building. He called again on March 16, and he found then that work had begun and he was able to make an inspection of the building operations. He came to the conclusion that the various portions of the wall were in a very unsound state. He reported this to Mr. R. J. Vennal, an architect in the P.W.D., and who was his immediate superior.

Walls Defective.

On March 21, Mr. Vennal visited the site and inspected the building, accompanied by Mr. Neville. He found that the walls were defective, they were cracked and were unsound. The brick-work was in a bad state also. He formed the opinion that these defects were caused by the fire which occurred in November, 1932, and that they were present in the walls as from that day.

These defects should have been in the plans which were submitted on January 10, and by reason of their not being shown on these plans, the prosecution submitted, the defendant was guilty of misrepresenting the true condition of the building.

Mr. Andrewes pointed out that by making these misrepresentations, defendant would endanger the new building to possible collapse.

Now Mr. Vennal, after satisfying himself of the poor condition of the walls, ordered all work to stop, told Mr. Gibson to prepare fresh plans and ordered that the defective portions of the wall be taken down. He communicated all these orders to the defendant, who had several interviews with him in the office and on the site. Notwithstanding Mr. Vennal's orders, work still continued. No proper plans were submitted and the walls were not taken down. Eventually it became necessary for the Government to erect shoring to make the walls safe and secure. The material divergence was that Mr. Gibson did not adhere to the plans. He erected a new portion of the proposed reconstruction, which he had not disclosed in his plans.

P.W.D. Officer's Evidence. Giving evidence, Mr. Vennal said he visited this building on the night of the fire last November. He saw then that No. 281 was on fire. On January 10, he received plans from Mr. Gibson together with a stability certificate, schedule "K," and a R.C.C. schedule. All these were signed by Mr. Gibson with the exception of the schedule "K," which was signed by the owners of the building. Witness dealt with the plans in the usual way by office routine, and found that they required one or two minor amendments. He then asked Mr. Gibson to call at the office, which he did on February 1. Witness explained what was required, and Mr. Gibson then took away the plans. They were submitted again with the required amendments, and they were approved on February 3, 1933.

Witness then explained in detail what certain colouring on plans meant, stating that Mr. Gibson by colouring certain portions grey meant that he was using these portions in the construction of a new building. This also meant, witness said, that when an architect reconstructs an old building and proposes to use old work to carry loads, he considers this old work to be capable of sustaining such loads.

On about March 16 or 17, Mr. Neville made a report to him about the building, and on March 21 he visited the premises and found that Mr. Neville's report was substantially correct. He found that the walls were cracked in various places. Some portions which were marked sound showed cracks, bad brickwork and hollow walls.

Witness attributed the bad condition of the premises to the fire. He said these defects must have been visible immediately after that conflagration. These cracks could be found on the ground, first and second floors.

Portions Pulled Down.

According to the plans submitted, certain walls were to have been left intact, but they were found to have been pulled down, while certain portions which were said to be sound, were found to be cracked.

Mr. Vennal spoke to Mr. Gibson about the discoveries he had made, and told him that further plans would be required. Witness suggested that Mr. Gibson should make an inspection. He also wrote a letter to Mr. Gibson confirming that conversation, and asking that work be stopped. The work was not stopped, however.

On March 30, Mr. Neville reported to witness that work was still in progress, and a few days later witness himself went to the site and discovered for himself that work had not stopped.

On March 29, witness saw further plans from Mr. Gibson but they were not in order. He accordingly returned them to Mr. Gibson on April 3. Two days later, Mr. Gibson called at the office, and witness told him that the position was getting serious.

Mr. Gibson stated, however, that he had not seen any of the letters written to him by the Building Authorities drawing his attention to the defects of the premises. Witness asked him how he could have sent in amended plans on March 29 if he had not seen the letters whereupon Mr. Gibson explained that the plans were not prepared by him or in his office, but by people outside. Therefore as the letters referred to work done by people outside, they might have been forwarded to these people. Witness warned him that he was the architect and would be held responsible.

On April 8, Mr. Gibson called at witness' office and said work had been stopped. Witness then told him that shoring would have to be put up. Mr. Gibson agreed and said he would have that done. Witness saw Mr. Gibson again on April 12 and told him that the shoring he had put up were not sufficient.

Witness had not received any new plans from Mr. Gibson, but had told him that if proper plans were submitted within three weeks he (witness) would be satisfied. If at the expiration of that period, no plans had been received, witness would take legal proceedings. The summons was taken out on June 6.

Mr. Lo reserved his cross-examination of this witness. Corroborative evidence was given by Mr. F. C. Neville, after which the hearing was adjourned until today.

COMBATING U.S. RACKETEERS

WAR DECLARED

Chicago, Illinois. The U. S. Government has entered the campaign to purge Chicago of racketeers.

Issuing subpoenas for the appearance of a score of leading business men, contractors and officials of trucking and coal companies, the Federal District Attorney took the first step to obtain convictions against "hoodlums" who have failed to pay income tax on alleged incomes from their "rackets."

The move is the result of a six weeks' investigation in "racket" conditions by officials sent here from Washington to cooperate in the drive against racketeers.

"TELEGRAPH" ART SUPPLEMENT

Amateur Competition Pictures

Numerous pictures of topical interest will be found in the "Telegraph's" Art Supplement to-morrow, although considerable space is given to entries in our amateur photographic competition. Some of the prints submitted are exceptionally good, both in technique and composition.

Seven investigators have been trying into union and trade organizations affairs.

The immediate objective of government prosecutors who have already met with success in using the income tax weapon against gangsters including "Al" Capone is understood to be the trucking and transportation exchange, alleged to be under control of Murray Humphrey successor to Al Capone as underworld overlord.

Gangsters are said to have levied a tribute on more than a million dollars a year from legitimate coal dealing and trucking interests in the city. Recently a series of terrorists' bombing centred attention on coal trucking racketeers here.—Reuter.

"LOT OF SCALLYWAGS."

JUDGE'S COMMENT ON RIVAL LITIGANTS

At the conclusion of an adjourned claim yesterday by an Indian for $130 against a compatriot, Mr. Justice Lindell gave judgment for the defendant, who was represented by Mr. da Silva.

Mr. M. K. Lo said he had intended to make a submission before his Lordship gave judgment.

The Judge: I don't wish to hear you, Mr. Lo. I seldom hear solicitors on the facts, and this is purely a question of fact.

Mr. Lo: I should have thought that the witnesses for the defence were so patently untruthful.

The Judge: I have no doubt that both parties are a lot of scallywags.

WORLD CONFERENCE SAVED—AS A SKELETON

but it leaked out that the suggestion for adjournment was moved by Mr. MacDonald himself, in the capacity of Chairman of the Steering Committee, thus avoiding the placing of the responsibility upon any particular country.

Still Undecided.

Just as it seemed as if the Bureau intended sitting through-out the lunch hour and completing its work in one session, it was announced that the Bureau had risen without reaching a decision.

They will assemble again at 3.30 o'clock to discuss further the method of adjournment.

All the delegates looked very grave as they left the Bureau meeting. M. Bonnet of France shrugged his shoulders, but did not reply when asked his opinion of the prospects. Mr. Bonnet, Prime Minister of Canada, said, "I don't think there is any question of the brightness or darkness. We have adjourned for lunch and at present there is nothing I can usefully say."

Mr. Bennett's View.

Mr. Bennett, who is fighting for the Dominions against adjournment, asserted emphatically to Reuter that the Conference would be unable to adjourn without the vote of the full Conference. This view is disputed in other quarters where it is suggested that the Bureau's decision can be put into effect forthwith, without a plenary session.

Unlike the League of Nations assemblies, the Conference has no standing rule and Mr. MacDonald is credited with the desire to settle the controversy behind closed doors in order that there should be no publicity given to disruptive views, which might prejudice a resumption of the Conference later in the year.

Only ten out of sixteen delegates contributed to the Bureau discussions, according to an official communiqué. There were Mr. Cordell Hull, Viscount Ishii, Signor Jung, M. Wigforss of Sweden, Mr. Bonnet, Mr. Chamberlain, Dr. Colijn, Mr. Bennett, Dr. Yen and Senor Doliver of Spain.

Confused Discussion.

It was learned that this morning's discussion was most confused owing to delegates talking at cross-purposes, hence it is impossible to foretell the precise outcome. As regards the objections to an adjournment without a plenary session, a compromise has been mooted; namely, a private meeting of an enlarged Bureau, including the heads of committees.

In any case an adjournment of the full Conference, and not merely the Monetary Commission, seems absolutely certain, though certain committees which are not affected by the currency problem, may be kept in existence.

An impassioned appeal for the continuance of the Conference was made by Mr. Hull in the Bureau, in which he urged that delegates should not be defeated by one snag, when the hopes of the world rested upon their shoulders. His speech had a tonic effect and drew support from the Japanese, Swedish and British Dominions delegates, and also Mr. Chamberlain.

When the Bureau adjourned for lunch, it was discussing a draft resolution providing for the continuance of the work of commissions, excluding all monetary and kindred questions. Several Bureau delegates lunched at the American Embassy and continued the discussions.

The House of Commons, it was announced, will debate the Conference position and results, on July 10.—Reuter.

QUEEN'S From SUNDAY

STILL TRUE—CHEVROLET ACHIEVES, WHILE OTHERS STILL TRY.

For four of the past six years Chevrolet has led the automobile world in sales. And its success is unquestionably due in no small part to the actual achievements in mechanical design and perfection formerly believed impossible in the low-priced field.

In the face of the keenest sort of buying of the last several years, Chevrolet continues in 1933 to lead in sales and the introduction of new features, many exclusive to Chevrolet alone and others expected only in higher priced cars. Among these examples are: the "OCTANE" GASOLINE SELECTOR, NO-DRAFT CONTROLLED VENTILATION, CUSHIONED POWER AND SAFETY GLASS.

YOUR HEALTH IS PROTECTED.

Drafty ventilation in closed cars is a well recognized source of discomfort and a frequent cause of colds and more serious ailments. All Chevrolet 1933 Model cars now have the protection of the exclusive No-Draft ventilation that gives you an ample supply of pure fresh air at all times without the discomfort and danger from weather and drafts. Can you afford to disregard this protection of your own, and your family's health and comfort in buying a car this year?

MISS DOROTHY ROUND REACHES WIMBLEDON FINAL

DISPUTE IN A LEAGUE TENNIS MATCH

PLAYERS' CLAIM NOT SUPPORTED BY THE RULES

YESTERDAY'S "C" DIV. RESULTS

The "C" Division of the Tennis League made welcome progress yesterday in the season's programme after persistent hindrance during recent weeks.

The Kowloon Cricket Club scored another merited victory, although there was little in it, the Filipino Club losing only by the odd set.

An interesting incident arose during this match, when Sousa and Leonard of the Filipino Club claimed the right to change positions to receive service in the course of a set.

The point was contested by the K.C.C. pair, who were, according to the rules of the game perfectly correct in their contentions.

THE RULES.

The rule states quite definitely "Partners shall receive the service alternately throughout each game and the order of receiving the service having been decided shall not be altered during the set, but it may be changed at the beginning of a new set."

Rule 34 adds "If during the course of receiving is changed by the receiver it shall remain as altered until the end of the game in which the mistake is discovered, but the partners shall resume their original order of receiving in the next game of that set in which they are receivers of the service."

From this it is perfectly clear that the Filipinos had no right to change their positions in the middle of a set.

It is an interesting point and one, perhaps, worthy of league players bearing in mind.

FINE WIN AGAINST HELEN JACOBS

NOW MEETS MRS. HELEN WILLS MOODY FOR THE LADIES BLUE RIBAND

SENSATIONAL DEFEAT OF HUGHES AND PERRY.

London, July 6.

Miss Dorothy Round, Britain's No. 1 ranking player is to be the final challenger to Mrs. Helen Wills-Moody for the Women's Singles title at Wimbledon.

"Yesterday the English girl, in one of the greatest performances of her career, defeated Miss Helen Jacobs, America's No. 2 by two sets to one after losing the first."

Mrs. Moody qualified for the final by easily beating Fraulein Krahwinkel in straight sets.

Sensational results were in

abundance to-day and spectators were kept in a quagmire as to which match they should watch.

The biggest shock was the elimination of Perry and Hughes the English Davis Cup pair, who were strongly favoured to win the Men's Doubles. They were beaten by Nuno and Satoh in a five set match.

In the Mixed Doubles, the day's programme saw the defeat of the holders, Maier and Miss Ryan and the exit of G. P. Hughes and Mrs. Moody and Henri Cochet and Mrs. Fearnley-Whittingstall.

The Centre Court was packed for the women's semi-finals. Mrs. Moody and Fraulein Krahwinkel were the first to meet. The heat was intense putting a big strain on the players, but the rallies were brisk throughout.

Mrs. Moody was in her best form and refused to permit Fraulein Krahwinkel to take a grip on the game. She fully exploited her unapproachable range of ground strokes, which were so accurately placed to the corners that she found little need to go up.

Fraulein Krahwinkel played courageous tennis, but was unable to withstand the withering attack of the American. She made excursions to the net in an effort to break up Mrs. Moody's baseline game, but discovered her opponent fully capable of responding with passing drives.

DOROTHY CHEERED.

Thousands cheered Miss Dorothy Round when she triumphed over Miss Jacobs. The English girl revealed amazing staying powers can rank as one of the finest exhibitions of will power seen on the Wimbledon Centre Court. It was reminiscent of Cochet's extraordinary come-back against Tilden.

Helen Jacobs captured the first set after ten games of high class tennis. Miss Round gave nothing away, but she took some little time to settle down and her chief danger was to allow Miss Jacobs to gain control.

The English girl came back with some astonishing tennis in the second set. Covering all the court she forced Miss Jacobs on the defence and amid great excitement levelled the scores.

In the final set there was only one player. Miss Jacobs found her game completely broken up and Miss Round piled up a big lead by which she assured herself of entry into the final.

The end came rapidly the third set finishing at the eight game to signal one of the greatest English victories enjoyed at Wimbledon for several years.

SHOCKS GALORE.

But on other courts there were shocks galore. Perry and Hughes were made to play second fiddle to Nuno and Satoh. The Englishman left their supporters bewildered by allowing the game to slip out of their fingers. They enjoyed the advantage of winning the first set and nullified it by losing the next two.

Even then they looked capable of winning and when they captured the fourth set at 6-1, it was odds on that the Japanese would be beaten. But once again the Englishman relaxed and the Japanese would be beaten. But once again the Englishman relaxed and the Japanese would be beaten. But once again the Englishman relaxed and the Japanese would be beaten.

Von Cramm and Fraulein Krahwinkel scored a magnificent victory for Germany when they paid to E. Maier and Miss Ryan, the holders, in the quarter final of the Mixed Doubles. The German couple accomplished this in two sets—a distinct achievement.

The Spanish-American pair were all at sea in the early stages of the match and conceded the opening set at 6-1. They improved after this, but the German gave nothing away and finally ran out to their points in the twelfth game of the second set.

HUGHES BELOW FORM.

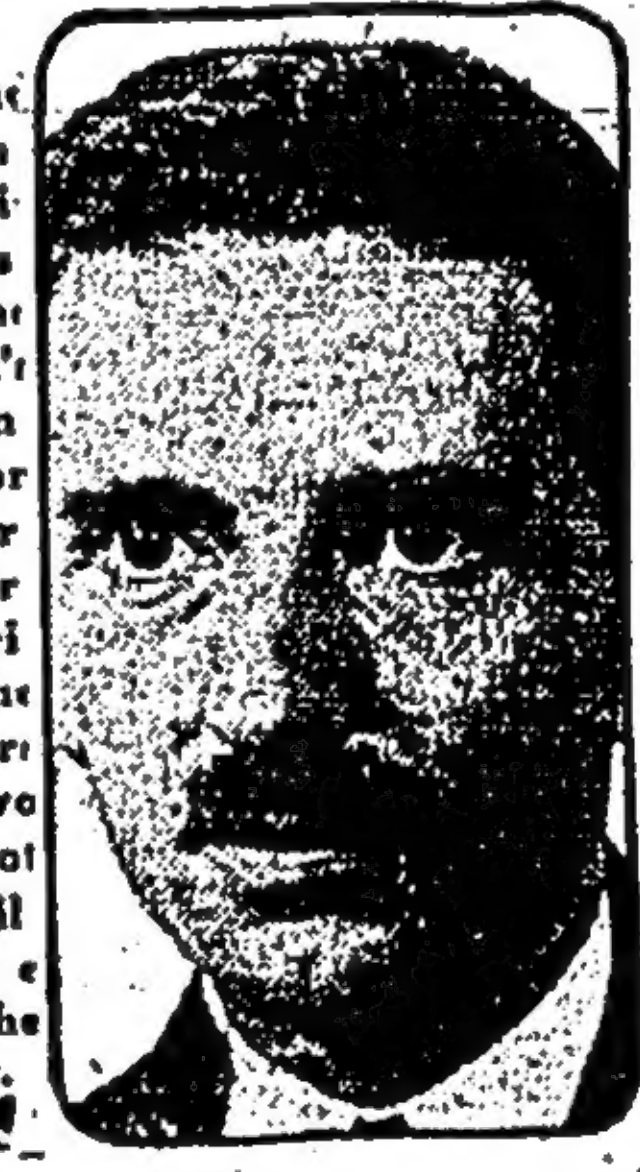

Then came the defeat of Hughes and Mrs. Moody, who fell victims to C. H. Kingsley, the former Davis Cup player and Mrs. L. A. Godfree. Here again two sets sufficed. Hughes was well below form and afforded Mrs. Moody little assistance. On the other hand Kingsley and Mrs. Godfree were remarkably steady and easily the better pair.

Cochet and Mrs. Whittingstall were strongly favoured in certain quarters to win the Mixed Doubles, but they failed at the fourth fence to-day, when the British pair, N. G. Farquharson and Miss Mary Heeley beat them in a great match which extended to three sets of 38 games.

The winners annexed the first set, but were offered stout op-

Borotra and Brugnion, the famous French tennis players, who yesterday reached the final of the Men's Doubles championship at Wimbledon by defeating Farquharson and Kirby.

TO-MORROW'S LAWN BOWLS

The Very Important Matches For Craigengower

Craigengower are faced with a difficult job to-morrow when they visit the Civil Service in the first division of the Bowls League. The Government servants are a formidable team to overcome on their own green, and it would not be a big surprise if Craigengower failed to negotiate this obstacle.

Nevertheless they have been playing splendid bowls recently. The Bowling Green visit the Police, and although it has been suggested that the Kowloon team is not so powerful on foreign soil, they should be capable of winning points to-morrow. The Recreio are bound to beat the K.C.C.

An important game in the second division is that between Craigengower and Civil Service. The result, whichever way it goes, must to some extent assist the Bowling Green, who cannot fall to win against the Indians.

Beaten By S.C.A.A.

YESTERDAY'S MATCH.

In the water polo league games played yesterday afternoon, the South China Athletic Association beat the Hongkong Chinese Civil Servants' Bathing Club at the latter's pool in North Point, the score being 2-0. The score for the first half was 2-0.

position in the second, and thanks chiefly to Cochet, lost it at the eighteenth game.

FRENCHMEN WIN GREAT GAME.

Borotra and Brugnion made their way into the semi-final of the Men's Doubles when they beat N.G. Farquharson and V.G. Kirby after a remarkable game.

The South Africans were two sets up and then went to pieces against the slashing attack of the Frenchmen.

Borotra was dazzling during the latter stages of the game and Brugnion's volleying was a feature.

Farquharson and Kirby played exceptionally well in the early stages and were so definitely on top that it looked as though France's big hopes were going to be beaten. The tennis was glorious in its variety and chance of fortunes.

Joan Ridley and Mrs. Pittman earned a pat on the back when they advanced to the semi-finals of the Women's Doubles over the nodules of Miss Betty Nuthall and Mrs. Whittingstall. The four players indulged in fireworks for two sets, in the course of which 28 games were played, but thereafter Betty and her partner faded away and the winners walked away with the third set losing only one game.

The game was one of the most colourful of the season. It saw Leslie Ames, wicketkeeper-batsman, make his highest score in first class cricket; it produced two other centurians, some fine bowling by Tich Freeman and another prolific partnership between Hammond and Dacre, who two days previously had equalled a 34 year old record.

On a perfectly good wicket, Gloucester failed dismally in their first innings. The slowness of Freeman had the whole of the batsmen guessing and his 6 for 18 in an innings which yielded 125 is tribute to the bowler's skill.

Kent demonstrated very plainly that there were runs in the wicket if one went the right way about gathering them.

Ames quickly attacked the bowling and batted in his finest style to collect 295 before dismissal. The innings was almost without blemish, and he made his runs all round the wicket. His flashing off drives constituted a feature of one of the greatest batting displays ever seen on the Folkestone ground. Although assisted by small boundaries, Ames put so much power behind most of his strokes that they would have yielded him fours even on large grounds.

TODD'S SECOND.

Leslie Todd, who has begun to find his real batting form and to realise the promise he gave as long ago as 1929, joined Ames in an orgy of run getting. He scored his second century of the season, an innings full of graceful strokes. Regarded as a second Woolley, Todd exhibited a style very similar to the great lefthander, effecting a number of delightful leg glances and powerful drives.

B. H. Valentine, whose consistent batting for Kent this season has been the one feature of the county's performances to date, joined in the happy work, and before the innings was closed at 592 for 6, had hit up 113. He retired unbeaten.

NO FIGHT.

Gloucester made little fight of it. Left to score 467 to avoid an innings defeat they were dismissed for 178. Only two batsmen saved the team from a veritable debacle, Hammond and Dacre, again becoming associated, treated the bowling with scant respect. Hammond hit up 56 before dismissal and Dacre helped himself to 78. After this the Kent bowlers and in particular Freeman, took command of the situation and skittled the rest of the team in double quick time.

Freeman's second innings bowling gave him figures of 6 for 42, and during the match he captured 11 for 60.

ENCOURAGING FOR OXFORD

EVE OF VARSITY MATCH WIN

Oxford scored an encouraging victory on the eve of the annual Varsity match with Cambridge, when to-day they beat a strong M.C.C. team by six wickets. Owen Smith laid the foundation by getting rid of the M.C.C. in their first knock for 182. He took 6 for 51.

Oxford were in a bad way, however, when Bowes sent them back for 128; but again the University attack rose to the occasion, and the Maryleboners were dismissed a second time for 136.

requiring 192 runs to win, Oxford hit them off for the loss of four wickets.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Backed by an impressive cast headed by Will Rogers, "Too Busy To Work," the celebrated wit's latest picture opens an engagement at the King's Theatre next Sunday.

The story of "Too Busy To Work" revolves around the adventures of a philosophical and kindly vagabond and his search for his daughter, whom his unfaithful wife took with her when she ran away with a more aristocratic man while he was away fighting in the war.

He finds her living luxuriously and in love, and rather than make her unhappy by revealing himself to her, he goes on his wandering way, contented by the thought that she is enjoying blessings that he could scarcely provide for her. While Rogers is said to be accorded more than the usual number of chances for witty comments, his role is also highly sympathetic.

Ben Ames Williams wrote the story which was prepared for the screen by Philip Klein and Barry Connors. The picture was directed by John Blystone, dean of directors for Fox Films.

"She Done Him Wrong"

Mae West's first starring picture, "She Done Him Wrong," comes on Sunday to the Queen's Theatre. The picture was written by Mae West. "She Done Him Wrong" is a lusty, roaring melodrama of the Bowery—a hearty tale of the notorious old avenue where men are men and women are "on the make." Its saloons and its politicians, its honky-tonks, and its "dames" furnish a background for the activities of the principal characters.

Miss West is cast as "Lady Lou," a famous bear-hall entertainer with a deadly effect on unwary males. Her suitors flock around her, practically in swarms, but she deals with them in a matter-of-fact fashion. Those who can provide her with the diamonds which are her weakness may enjoy her favours. The others?—too bad.

Into this scene comes Cary Grant, apparently a mission-worker without a diamond to his name. His appearance on the scene leads to a startling, highly dramatic climax, which puts Lady Lou in his arms without the customary tribute in gems.

Miss West sings three songs during the course of the picture: the popular old ballad, "Frankie and Johnnie," and two new songs, "A Man What Takes His Time" and "Haven't Got No Peace of Mind," which were written for her by Ralph Rainger, composer of "Moanin' Low," "Please," and other popular successes.

In addition to Grant, Noah Beery, Owen Moore, Luella Landau and Gilbert Roland are in the supporting cast.

"Lady With a Past"

Gay and brilliant, "Lady With a Past" the new attraction at the Central Theatre to-day, is another Constance Bennett starring hit. A modern comedy strongly dished with romance, it is played against fashionable background and provides the dazzling blonde star with a perfect vehicle. For the first time in a considerable period, Miss Bennett is not cast as a poor working girl or an erring sister who has fallen and been redeemed by love. She is cast as a wealthy member of a fashionable social set in this RKO Pathe production, and is thoroughly convincing, as well as altogether lovely in the part. One big advantage of the new characterization, which all feminine fans will appreciate, is the opportunity it affords the star of wearing beautiful, modish costumes from the first scene to the last.

Based upon Harriet Henry's latest novel, "Lady With a Past" tells the very human story of a love-hungry girl who cannot attract men because she is shy and more serious than the other beauties in her social set.

"The Painted Woman"

As a copra trader, the three-masted schooner, "Methu Nelson" has covered much of the South Seas in her time. Later as a lumber vessel, and then as a cannery tender, she cruised many more thousands of miles in diminishing glory.

More recently, as the sealer "Ghost," she was an important factor in the Fox Films production of "The Sea Wolf" and then she became the mystery-ship "Dolphin" under George O'Brien's command in "The Seas Beneath."

Now she returns to the copra trade again as the "Southern Cross" with William (Stage) Boyd as her skipper in "The Painted Woman" the exciting South Sea romance which is now playing at the King's Theatre. According to her master, Captain A. L. Laur, who has handled her since the beginning of her film career, the schooner is as sturdy as the day—she was launched in 1897 and should play her part in many more seagoing pictures.

Spencer Tracy and Peggy Shannon have the leads in "The Painted Woman."

JAVA PASSENGER VICTIM OF FALSE EXCHANGE

Convicted on a charge of feloniously uttering two ten-guilder forged bank-notes of the Government of the Dutch East Indies, in exchange for $40 Foochow currency, Ngai Hak-kau was sentenced to six months' hard labour by Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon, when the hearing was concluded. Another defendant, Kong Sui-kwong, who was charged with aiding and abetting, was discharged.

Complainant was a Chinese passenger on the s.s. Tjisondari en route to the Dutch East Indies. While coming ashore to a boarding house, he met the defendants on a sampan. He invited them to the Empress Hotel where, over coffee, the defendants spoke of exchanging money. Complainant, not having any with him went to the boarding house and returned with $40 in Foochow currency. The first defendant gave him in exchange the two notes and seven silver pieces. Prior to this, defendants asked complainant whether he was going to Java, and he replied in the affirmative.

Detective-Sub-Inspector O'Donovan conducted the prosecution.

A UFA SUPER SPECIAL

IMPORTANCE OF

A RACE OF MENTAL GIANTS

Hopes of a new standard of health for future generations are seriously entertained by the organizers of a novel scheme for teaching "bodily control"—conscious control of the use of ourselves—which is now being planned in London.

Certain medical authorities attach such importance to the work that a Trust Fund has been established to perpetuate the teaching. The Earl of Lytton, Sir Lynden Macnaghten and Dr. Peter Macdonald have consented to act as trustees.

Failure to hold the head, neck and body in the correct relation in our activities is held to be responsible for many physical ills, and it is to correct these faulty "postural reflexes" that the technique is designed. It is the life-work of Mr. F. Matthias Alexander, and was originated 30 years ago.

To-day the starting of a school to teach this technique to children; and the publication of a book, "Health and Education Through Self-Mastery," to convey its principles to the general public, coincide to crown his efforts.

A DEMONSTRATION.

A startling demonstration of the significance of muscular control was given by Mr. Alexander. He was a man, one would have said, of about 55; suddenly he withered as if the weight of another quarter century lay upon his shoulders. There was no question of acting,

PERFECT NOSE FROM IVORY

PLASTIC SURGEON'S ACHIEVEMENT

Philadelphia, P.
Elephant ivory from the jungles of Africa are supplying the answer to milady's wish for a perfect nose.

A plastic surgeon whose skill has transformed the faces of some of the ugliest prisoners in the Eastern Penitentiary told all about it in a paper before a hospital staff of surgeons.

He traced the art of nose-rebuilding from the time such metals as gold and silver were used up through the paraffine and transplanted cartilage periods.

But he declared that ivory is the best of them all. He said that the material can be shaped perfectly at the convenience of the operator—and it isn't right the first time, it can be reshaped.—Reuter.

he neither moved nor spoke, he only shrivelled before the eyes. He lost three inches in height, his spine sagged, his shoulders contracted, his arms hung loosely, he was an octogenarian. It was a most uncanny experience.

The production of a race of mental giants who will not know the ills our flesh is heir to, and who, by their superior co-ordination, will be able to put right the world, is foreseen by Professor John Dewey, Gifford Lecturer in 1929, when Mr. Alexander's principles are taught from youth up.

Just as perfect co-ordination and the ability to carry out the action one wishes can improve a man's performance at golf, so, Mr. Alexander hopes, will it improve his performance in every other field whether it be finance, politics, or economics.

"WAR" IN THE BALKANS

LOCUSTS INVADE
YUGO-SLAVIA

CHEMICAL WARFARE

Belgrade.
"War" has broken out in the Balkan countries—trench and chemical warfare, too.

A generalissimo, Professor Mithallo Gradojevitich, leading an "army" of many thousands, has launched the first great offensive against the hordes of locusts which are invading the Banat region of northern Yugo-Slavia.

In the frontier areas this army is to act in concert with the Rumanian and Hungarian authorities, for an alliance against the locusts was formed with them during the winter.

CROPS DESTROYED.

With the first breath of spring the eggs of the pest left by the legions which last year destroyed all crops for miles around have begun to hatch out. When the sentries noticed this first appearance of the enemy, word was sent to headquarters and the offensive began.

The land has been divided into areas of 200 acres, one sentry being appointed to watch each area. When the enemy is spotted an attack is launched with chemical preparations fired through powerful sprays. Trenches are also dug around the infected land to prevent the spread of the pest to neighbouring lands. The trenches are filled with soft soap, the most deadly material in the "army's" arsenal.

The first encounters resulted in sweeping successes for the human forces.—Reuter.

DUKE OF ARGYLL'S HEIR SUE

DIVORCE CASE OPENS

DAUGHTER OF LORD BEAVERBROOK

London, July 7.
The greatest interest is being taken in a divorce suit which opened to-day between the daughter of Lord Beaverbrook, and the heir presumptive of the Duke of Argyll.

Mrs. Janet Gladys Aitken Campbell, Lord Beaverbrook's daughter, is the plaintiff and the respondent is Mr. Ian Douglas Campbell.

The parties were married in 1927 and there is one daughter, Mr. Campbell is 30 years of age.

The case began to-day before Lord Fleming in the Edinburgh Court of Sessions.

The proceedings have been brought on the grounds of Mr. Campbell's alleged infidelity, which he denies.

FRENCH DOMICILE.

The initial move of the defence was the raising of the question of the jurisdiction of the court, on the ground that respondent was born in Paris and claims French domicile. Hence he is not subject to the jurisdiction of a Scottish court in matrimonial affairs.—Reuter.

A stock gambling fever is sweeping through the United States, according to the New York Sun.

There is a tremendous activity among Chicago trade brokers and in cotton dealings in the south.

DIFFICULTIES OVER SINGAPORE

Wellington, N.Z., July 7.

An allegation that Chinese and Japanese merchants in Singapore were under-selling British goods was made before the Tariff Commission to-day.

It was stated that these merchants were taking advantage of the British Empire preferences under the Ottawa Agreement and at the same time were manufacturing goods at a low cost by means of native labour.

Professor Murphy, a member of the Commission, said that under the Ottawa Agreement, New Zealand undertook to afford the Crown certain mandated territories the same preferences received by Britain.

INTERNATIONAL CONTESTS

THRILLING RACES

London, July 6.

Some of the most thrilling international racing ever was witnessed at Henley Royal Regatta in glorious weather to-day.

The crowd was in a gay mood and there are signs that Saturday, the great day of the event, will break all records for attendance. In the Diamond Sculls, Opel (Germany) beat Saurin, the French champion, by a third of a length. It was a grim struggle throughout. Saurin led for most of the way, but Opel made a terrific effort when the winning post came in sight and just won. It collapsed at the finish.

Warren (Cambridge University) beat Coles (Barclays Bank) the conqueror of Guye, comfortably. Askwith (Cambridge) beat Rutherford (Princeton University, America).

In the Silver Goblets, the brothers Bigland, of Chester, eliminated De Colsandro and Bianchi, of Italy.

In the Steward's Cup, Mannheimer (Germany) beat Third Trinity "B" (Cambridge) and Pembroke (Cambridge) beat Spindlesfelder (Germany) breaking the eight-year record to Fawley by covering the distance in 3 minutes, 36 1/5th seconds.

FIGURES FOR JULY

THIRTY NEW CASES THIS WEEK

STEPS TAKEN IN TIME

Thirty fresh cases of malaria have been diagnosed at Shing Mun since the beginning of this month, according to official figures supplied to the Telegraph this morning.

The official daily figures for the month as given to our representative at Shing Mun this morning are as under:

	Old Material cases	New, Diagnosed clinically	Other cases
July 1	15	—	5
July 2	15	(No record available)	—
July 3	8	2	4
July 4	10	5	5
July 5	11	7	6
July 6	10	9	6
To-day	14	7	6

It was also officially stated that since March, twenty-five serious cases have been taken to hospital, this number including nine Shanghai coolies and four Indians.

NEWCOMERS AFFECTED.

In the course of enquiries regarding the history of the outbreak, the Telegraph has learned that the majority of "cases on the site are practically limited to newcomers from Shanghai. The rest of the coolies have probably had malaria all their lives and are more or less immune.

The majority are from Tsun Wan village, below the works and while some are resident on the site a large number return home every night.

Malaria mosquitoes, we were informed, have been found in the village, and it is probable that the villagers took malaria to the Shing Mun Valley with them. Blood tests had been taken of those working on the site, both Shanghai coolies and local coolies.

TAKEN IN TIME.

In reference to the anti-malarial work being carried out, information was gleaned that unless the precautions which are now being taken had been started when they were, the position would have been very serious.

The work had run well into the malarial season and the rainy season and if it had been possible to complete that work before that the outbreak would have been checked a great deal. However, the work was now going on very well and given fine weather it would be possible to overtake the delay occasioned.

"If we had not started the anti-malarial work here when we did there would be no work going on here now" said one person in answer to a question.

WORST PERIOD OF YEAR.

He continued that they were now going through the worst period of the year for malaria, but when the rainy season really set in the cases should decrease, as the rain would tend to interfere with the breeding places in that it would wash away the larvae and eggs, while the winds scatter the mosquitoes themselves over the country. This would keep them from concentrating in one particular place.

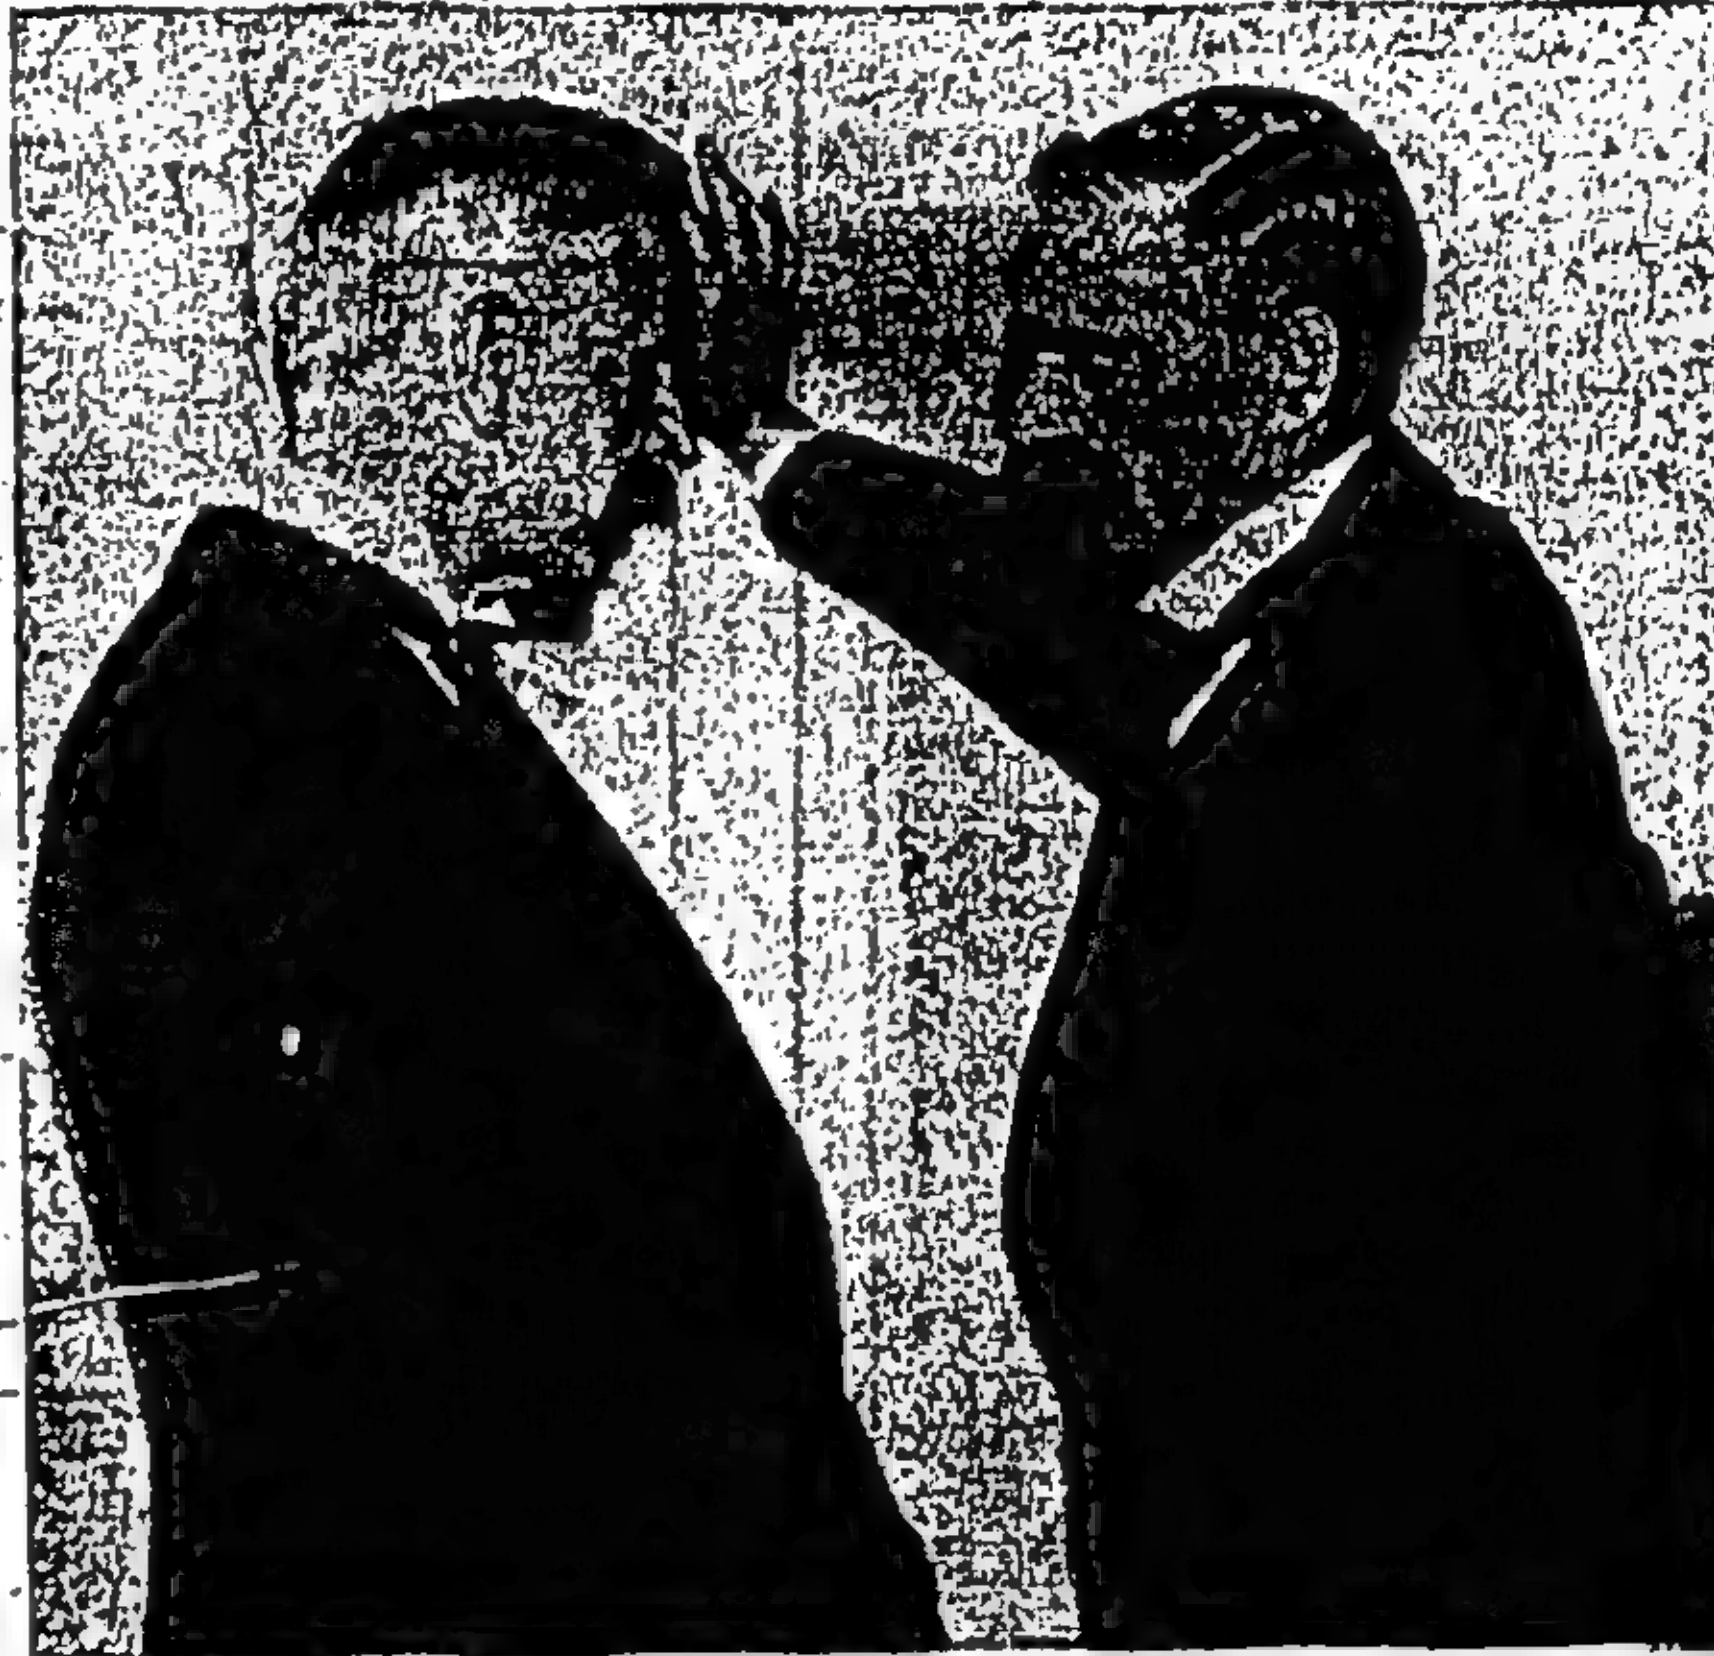

A FRESH START.

It was pointed out that there is only a four months' season for malaria, so during the remaining eight months they will be able to recuperate and get a fresh start next year.

Another statement was to the effect that what are believed to be breeding places have been found within the half-mile radius of the camp.

It was also stated that although the coolies only a percentage were affected, the outbreak was not serious.

Eight students from the University are at present stationed at Shing Mun.

INDUSTRIALISED PROVINCE

FEARS POLISH INFLUENCE

Berlin, July 7.

The rural province of East Prussia is to be industrialised on a large scale in a desperate attempt to prevent Polish influence from penetrating the province.

A long story to this effect is contained in the Königsberg Preussische Zeitung to-day.

It is stated that Herr Hitler's plan provides for Government co-operation with the leading industries of the Reich, especially in such lines as metals and textiles.

The waterways of the province will be brought up to date to make the best use of export possibilities, while Königsberg will be made a special source of culture, the university being raised to national rank.

The plan is said to involve breaking up the huge Junker estates and dividing them among the workers.—Reuter.

TREATY WITH VATICAN.

Vatican City, July 4.
Chancellor Hitler has cabled approval of a draft of a treaty between Germany and the Vatican which was expected to be initiated immediately.

It provided that priests will have equal power with civil authorities to perform marriages. Catholic Youth organizations will be permitted to continue in Germany, although they must confine their activities to religious affairs. Religious education will likewise be safeguarded under the treaty.

According to rumours now in circulation, negotiations for a large loan to China are proceeding in London.

It is indicated that Mr. T. V. Soong is staying in London for this purpose.

Mr. J. R. Roper, the Conservative member for Macclesfield, is to ask Mr. Neville Chamberlain in the House Commons on Monday if he is aware that Mr. T. V. Soong is now negotiating with a prominent firm of London bankers for a large loan for China, the proceeds of which may be used for the purchase of goods abroad.

He will also ask if the Chancellor of the Exchequer will make it a condition before sanctioning such a loan that the proceeds should be expended on the purchase of goods in Great Britain.—Reuter.

ANTI-GOLD BLOC SUGGESTED

REGIONAL AGREEMENTS POSSIBILITY

LONDON PAPERS CYNICAL

London, July 7.

In their comments upon the decision of the Bureau of the Conference to carry on as best they can, the London newspapers this morning are inclined to be cynical.

The Times takes a rather different line. It is of the opinion that no good reason exists why the non-gold countries, whose joint interest in international trade is more than double that of the gold standard countries, should lose the opportunity of reaching agreements to promote trade revival.

The journal suggests that the future discussions of the Conference might lie for the present, between groups of countries, naturally drawn together by their geographical situation or by their trading interests.

EMPIRE CO-OPERATION.

For example, says The Times, it would be the greatest waste of a precious opportunity if the British Empire representatives did not take advantage of the present meeting to consolidate their industrial, commercial and agricultural co-operation.—Reuter.

FRENCH CRITICISM

PRESIDENT LEBRUN'S SPEECH.

President Lebrun, speaking at Besancon bluntly criticised the monetary policies of President Roosevelt and offered the "wise counsel" of France, based on trial and experience.

While avoiding specific mention of Mr. Roosevelt and the United States, his remarks were pointed. He said the world should "courageously tackle the real cause of the trouble instead of abandoning itself to easy solutions whose ill effects or uselessness are proved by experience."

President Lebrun reiterated France's advocacy of controlled production through international agreements as opposed to the American policy of raising world prices to cope with the depression, an issue that has threatened to wreck the world economic conference at London.

Raising of prices, he said, would follow naturally from a programme of controlling production, while uncertain permanent achievement would result from "these artificial measures of monetary devaluation, credit inflation and excessive international credits for the same purpose, which are hardly recommended by recent experience."

Mr. Lebrun pointed to the perils of currency inflation as experienced by France as well as by Germany, all German monetary values having been swept away a decade ago while French investors lost some 80 per cent. by devaluation of the franc on a lower basis.

SUWA MARU TRAGEDY

H.K. PASSENGER DROWNED

THREW HIMSELF INTO SEA

A gloom was cast over the N.Y.K. boat, Suwa Maru, yesterday morning when a second class passenger, Mr. G. H. de Carvalho, of Orient Buildings, 579, Nathan Road, Kowloon, threw himself into the sea and was drowned despite all efforts to save him.

The tragedy occurred about 12 a.m. when deceased walked on to the promenade deck, mounted the rail, and jumped overboard with his arms extended above his head. A first class passenger who was playing a deck game said: "It was all over in a minute. He just threw himself into the sea. I shouted out and threw life belts towards him but of course, he was a hundred yards behind before we could do anything."

LADIES FAINT.

Several lady passengers fainted. The ship stopped and a small boat was rowed to the spot but they could not find him. I saw Mr. de Carvalho appear once above the water still holding his arms above his head. The man did not want to be saved. They searched for him for half an hour and then had to give it up.

The deceased boarded the ship at Shanghai and booked for Hong Kong where he has some relatives. A steward on the Suwa Maru, which is commanded by Captain Akiyoshi, said the deceased did not take part in any of the usual games and amusements of the passengers, but spent most of his time alone in the dining saloon.

A MERCHANT.

On the passenger list he was described as a British subject, aged 37, and his occupation was given as a merchant. He was a native of the Colony but had recently spent some time in Shanghai.

It is understood that deceased left no letters which would throw any light on his death.

What Children Take For Granted as Necessary
They Do Uncomplainingly

By Olive Roberts Barton.

The sooner we learn the word
"must" the sooner we accept life without a murmur.

It would be foolish for instance to suppose that one-tenth of us would be educated if we were not "made" to go to school. I never have taken much stock in the pining of the heart for the three "R's," or for a knowledge of maps or battles. Here and there we find a Lincoln or an Edison who would have educated himself if never a book had been written or a school house built, but the yearning for knowledge is absent in most people.

Probably they would grow up to regret not being able to read and write, and perhaps some thousands would make an effort to learn when they discovered what they had missed. But by that time it would be real work to learn. The time of adaptation and quick absorption is childhood.

The Lesson of Acceptance

What children take for granted as necessary, they do. They know they must go to school and with few exceptions off they trot.

However, this is no dissertation on the merits of education, its advantages or disadvantages, or the extent to which it should be carried. Neither is it a discussion of how many children like it, or how many do not, for the fact remains that few children ever set up serious conflicts about school. They say they hate it but they don't actually. The big thing is that they "accept" it and in this very fact we have an enormous lesson.

The lesson is that what children learn to accept as a matter of course in childhood they do—and do it without any serious consequences.

What is true of school is true of home duties, of neatness about themselves, of obedience, of going to bed on time and other regular habits. It certainly is true of work.

Puppets, Not the Goal

We don't wish to make them in-to mechanical puppets or block off their time by chart. They have so much supervision in school they need a little free-time and play-time out of it. They need, also hours in which they belong to themselves to work but their own ideas, or simply to relax.

But it is obvious that those things they learn must be done, will be done, without too much conflict later on. The habit of acceptance—making up one's mind to endure unpleasant things—grows with the years.

Who is it that suffers the nervous breakdown in maturity? The man or woman who has been taught to face things and do them without a murmur when they were children, or the indulged, lazy, petted ones who never knew what it was to have a responsibility? It answers itself. Too many such children cannot carry on happily and sanely when life's serious problems inevitably face them.

Constant Conflict Harmful

They wear themselves out fighting to get away from them. Each day they have to jump the fence of their own desires and in time it

GLORIFYING
YOURSELFGet Your Suntan
Cautiously

By Alicia Hart

You'll have to make up your mind immediately whether to go suntan or not this summer.

If you say "Thumbs down" on tan, take a look at the new sunproof beauty lotion which is designed to "un-proof" the skin and protect it from sunburn, tan and freckles.

It is a lovely pinkish lotion of pleasant odour and cool to the wears them out. Conflict! Conflict! Conflict! Trying each day to scare up enough courage to go on—and losing.

Parents will do well, I think, to consider the years ahead. Will their children know how to meet real responsibility with courage and serene minds in the years to come? If it is to be so then they will have to learn that word "must" by heart before it is too late.

touch and you just paint it onto your arms, face, neck and hands with a wad of cotton dipped into water and march out into the sun's blaze sure that you'll come back just as delicate a shade as you left.

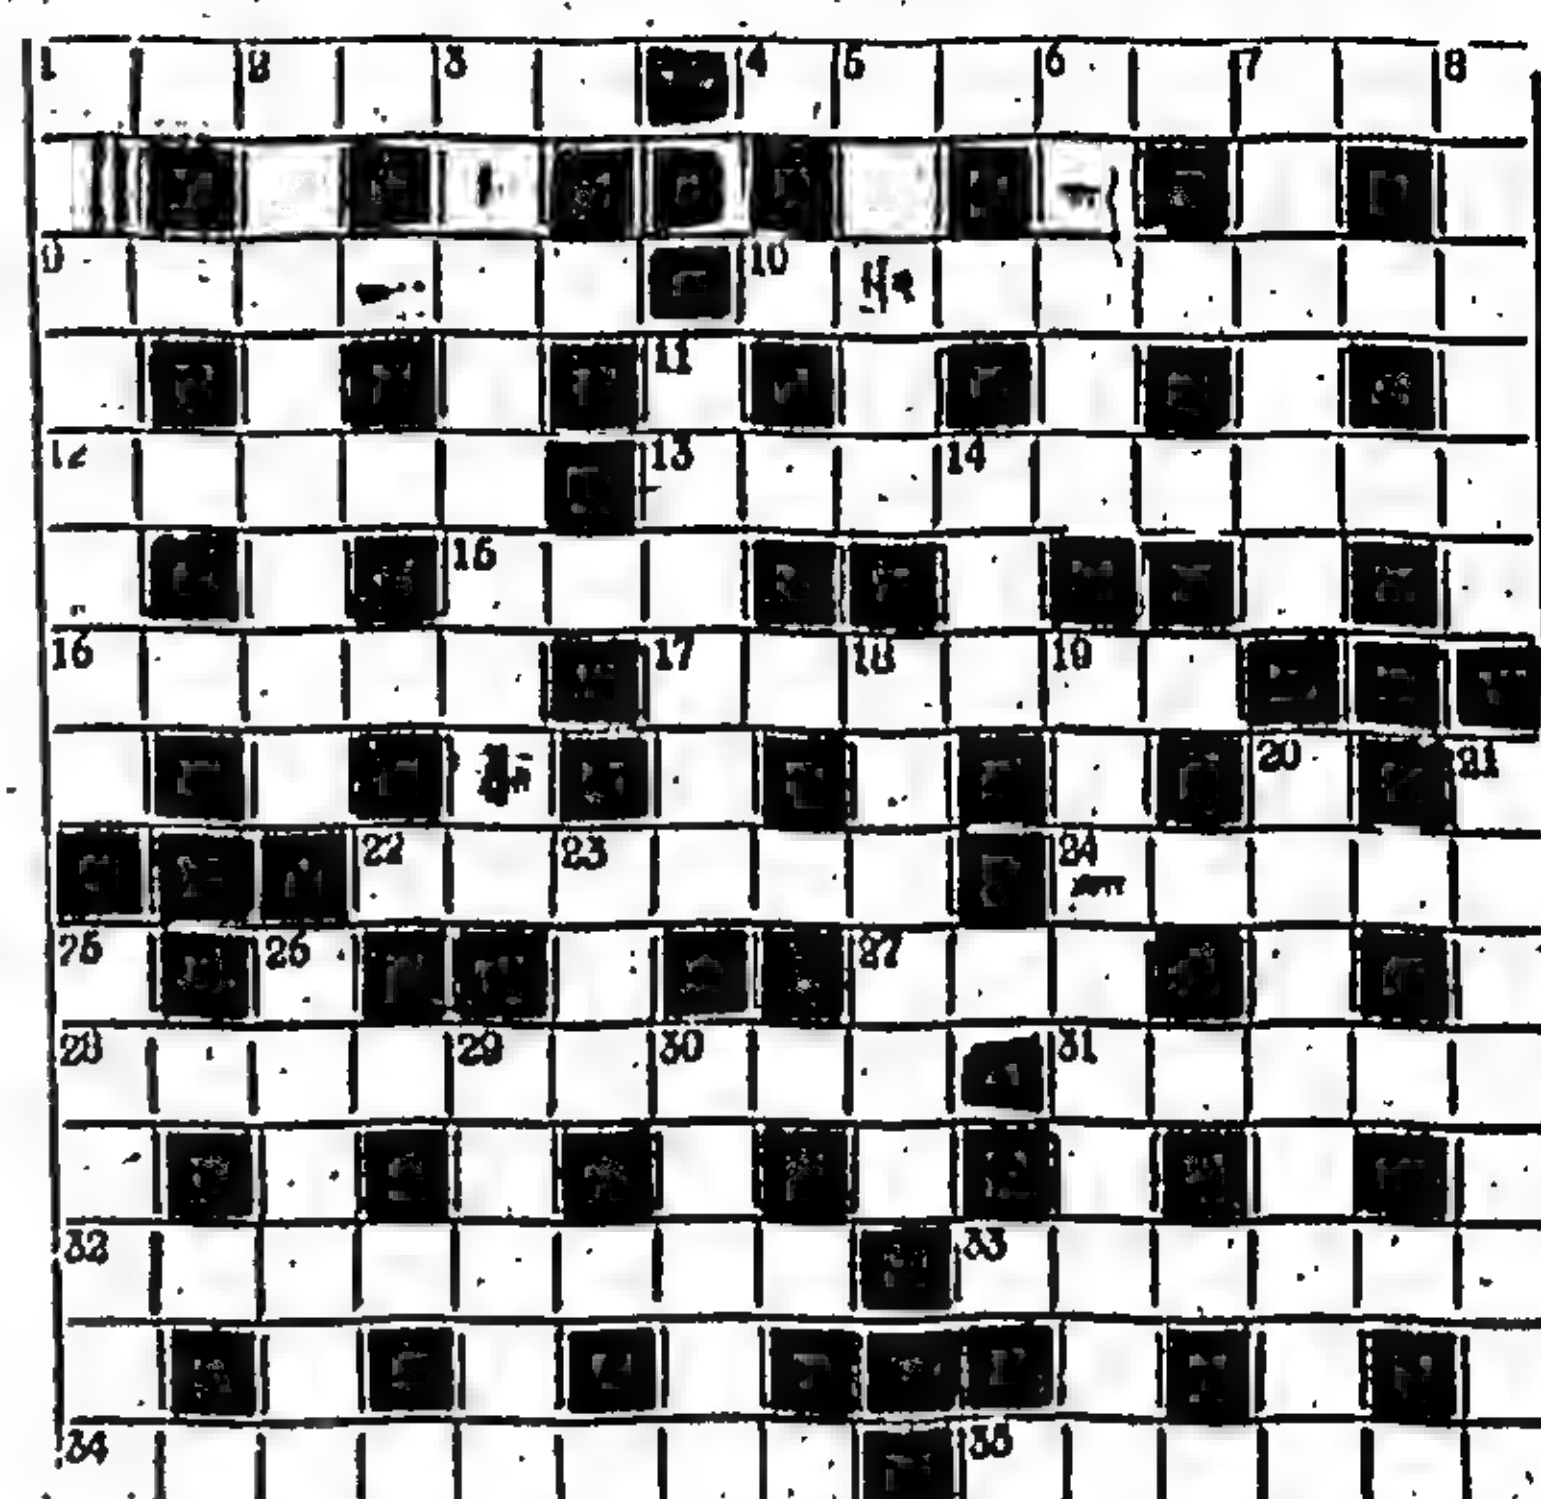

If you go suntan, do remember to take it easy. Get some suntan oil that prevents burning too quickly, which always hurts.

And, until you get your proper shade of suntan, there is a new suntan lotion that you can apply to get the effect that you really will have later in the season. It is a deep, rich suntan in colour, is applied with cotton in a once-over manner to your face, neck, arms and hands. And it makes you look as if you have spent your summer at the beach, before you even start.

For girls who must work in offices when they would much prefer lounging at the beach or in the mountains, this suntan lotion is a boon. It gives you such a vacation-look! And you all know the psychological uplift to yourself and those you see if you can have that look—whether you've had the vacation or not.

Last, but not least, change your make-up to suit your new suntan.

"Ready," she smiled, linking her arm in Kay's. "What is all this?"

Kay looked over her shoulder. "Miss Anstice ran in this morning," she confided. "Guess why she wanted to see me?"

"I couldn't," Monnie said. "Tell me."

Kay paused dramatically, before delivering the bombshell. "She's suggesting me to do her work on the paper while she goes abroad."

"Kay, how splendid! That's because of the way you worked on the school paper."

Kay squeezed her sister's arm. "Exactly. And Mr. Whittingham thinks I'm much too young but she's talking him over. She was

"I did help her last winter when she was laid up," Monnie mused. "Oh, Kay, if you get it I can do lots for you!"

"No, you can't," said Kay coolly. "Why not?"

Kay's eyes twinkled with mischief. "You goose, can't you guess?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," Monnie said with impatience.

Kay gave her a little shake. "Miss Anstice's going abroad," she repeated impatiently.

"Well, what on earth has that got to do with me?" Monnie demanded.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

MONICA O'DARE helps to support her mother, younger brother and sister by working in a drug store in the small town of Belvedere. Her brother, Bill, plans to marry ANNE GILLEN as soon as Anne divorces her husband. Monica is in love with DAN CARDIGAN whose wealthy parents do not approve of her. SANDRA LAWRENCE, pretending to be Monica's friend, tries to win Dan from her. Sandra becomes angry with Bill, a maid, and JAMES, her father's chauffeur, and discharges them. A few days later she receives a telephone message saying her father is hurt. Sandra hurries to him only to find himself the victim of kidnappers. The kidnappers prove to be Betty and her cousin, James helps Sandra escape.

CHAPTER XXVI

Dan explained slowly, painfully. "It's like this, you see. She's had a shock. She's not—not herself. She keeps calling for me. When she's well enough the doctor says it'll be all right for her to make this trip. And Dad—all the rest of them seem to think I ought to go along. Just," he hastened to add, "to humour her. She's perfectly all right. It was just a bad shock."

"I see," Monnie lifted her eyes, staring out at the fading garden. Dan rushed along. It was not like him to be so garrulous. These fellows, he said, had got away. Sandra was so dazed she couldn't even describe them. They'd been foreigners, though. Hadn't talked much English—not that she could understand, anyway. She had been plucky, hadn't she, to get away from them?

"Very brave," agreed Monnie quietly. Sandra seemed definitely the heroine of the occasion. "Her father was on his way to put the money where they asked," Dan pursued. "He was just about wild, willing to do anything to get her back. But she wasn't having any of that!" Dan's eyes shone. You could see he admired Sandra's courage.

"Not that I want to go—for a minute," Dan told her later. "It just seems—well—the best thing. You see Mr. Lawrence holds that big loan of Dad's. This is confidential, of course. Dad wants to stand in with him right now. I'd be a pig, wouldn't I, to hold out against him?"

Again Monnie agreed. The best thing—of course it was merely that, nothing more. No plot to get Dan away from her. She was foolish to imagine that, even for a minute. Such things were done only in old-time melodramas. Besides, weren't one and Dan pledged to each other? This was the end of August—almost September. In January they would be married.

"I'll miss you horribly, every minute," Dan told her on parting. She stood, facing him, her amber eyes darkened with the pain of impending separation. Little bronze tendrils curled about her pearl pale face. "I'll be thinking of you, too, Dan," she told him soberly.

"Well, then—" He was awkwardly trying to tear himself away. "It's early but I've got all that packing to do. We make an early start on Wednesday. I won't be able to see you to-morrow night."

Her heart was like lead. "It doesn't matter." He put his arms about her. "You're sweet, Monnie, I've known that? My girl!" "Don't, Dan. Someone might see."

No one must know—no one—their plans for the future. Some jealous fate might intervene.

How big he was, how splendid, Monnie thought, watching him stride down the path. Why was it that, in spite of all his protestations, her heart failed her, went sick and faint when she thought of the impending separation? Nothing would happen. Sandra would find that Dan's heart was sealed against her. It was just bad luck that affairs fell out so Dan had to go to Wyoming with the party.

She went back into the house where Kay sat, mending some flimsy pink garment. Kay looked up seriously.

"That Dan?"

Monnie nodded.

"He left early, didn't he?"

"Yes. He's awfully busy. Going to a dude ranch on Wednesday with the family."

"I read about it in the News," Kay said coolly. She knew then that Sandra was in the party. But she refrained from further comment. Kay went on stitching, humming a little tune under her breath.

Monnie picked up a book and tried to read but her restlessness was acute. A pain beat at the back of her mind like a living thing. She felt sick, envious, discouraged. Sandra had everything and she had nothing. Her job was dead. Always the same. She could do bigger things, more interesting ones, but because she was the mainstay of the little family she dared not take a chance. She sighed and found Kay watching her.

"Don't you feel well?"

"I have a headache," Monnie said. Heartache was nearer the truth but she would not admit it.

"Take an aspirin when you go to bed," said Kay practically.

Twenty-four hours more and Dan would be speeding westward away from her. She would have his letters, of course, but Dan's letters were never satisfactory. When he was away from her he seemed to vanish completely. Oh, she was a fool, she knew that, to be so apprehensive. What did a month matter? He would be back soon. "You have the fidgets," Kay observed, threading her needle. "Why don't you toddle off and get some rest?"

"Believe I will."

Kay gazed sternly at the doorway through which she had just passed. "Dan Dan Cardigan, any way!" she whispered explosively.

They heard the great news about Miss Anstice Cory the following morning. Mrs. O'Dare, reading the Belvedere News, looked up with a little cry of excitement and pleasure.

"Girls, what do you think? Miss Anstice is an heiress! Judge Cory's sister in Boston has left her $50,000."

Monnie, heavy eyed and pale, sipping her coffee, smiled. "How marvellous!"

It made the day seem brighter, this news of something nice happening to someone she knew. Anything might happen if Miss Anstice were to be removed from the scene of her labours, after 20 years of writing Belvedere society notes. It almost helped Monnie to bear the thought that Dan was leaving for Wyoming on the morrow.

Perhaps he would call, Monnie thought. Perhaps he would find time to telephone her—surely, he would. But each time the phone rang and she answered it to find the caller was emphatically not Dan, her heart grew heavier.

Kay flew in at lunch hour, sparklingly pretty, lit by an inner excitement.

"Just ran over for a second," Kay carolled. "Something important to tell you. Are you leaving now for lunch?"

The old Russian Consulate General, Shanghai, seen above from the Garden Bridge, is undergoing a "beauty" treatment these days to make it habitable for its new owners from the U.S.S.R. Both inside and out, the structure is being secured, refinished, and entirely renovated, a process thoroughly needed after having been empty since 1927 when China severed relations with U.S.S.R. Many tokens of old times were found by investigating workmen when they started operations, and it was also discovered that thieves and house-breakers had been at work. Similar projects are underway in Tientsin, Nanking, and other central Chinese cities to make way for the resumption of Sino-Russian relations.

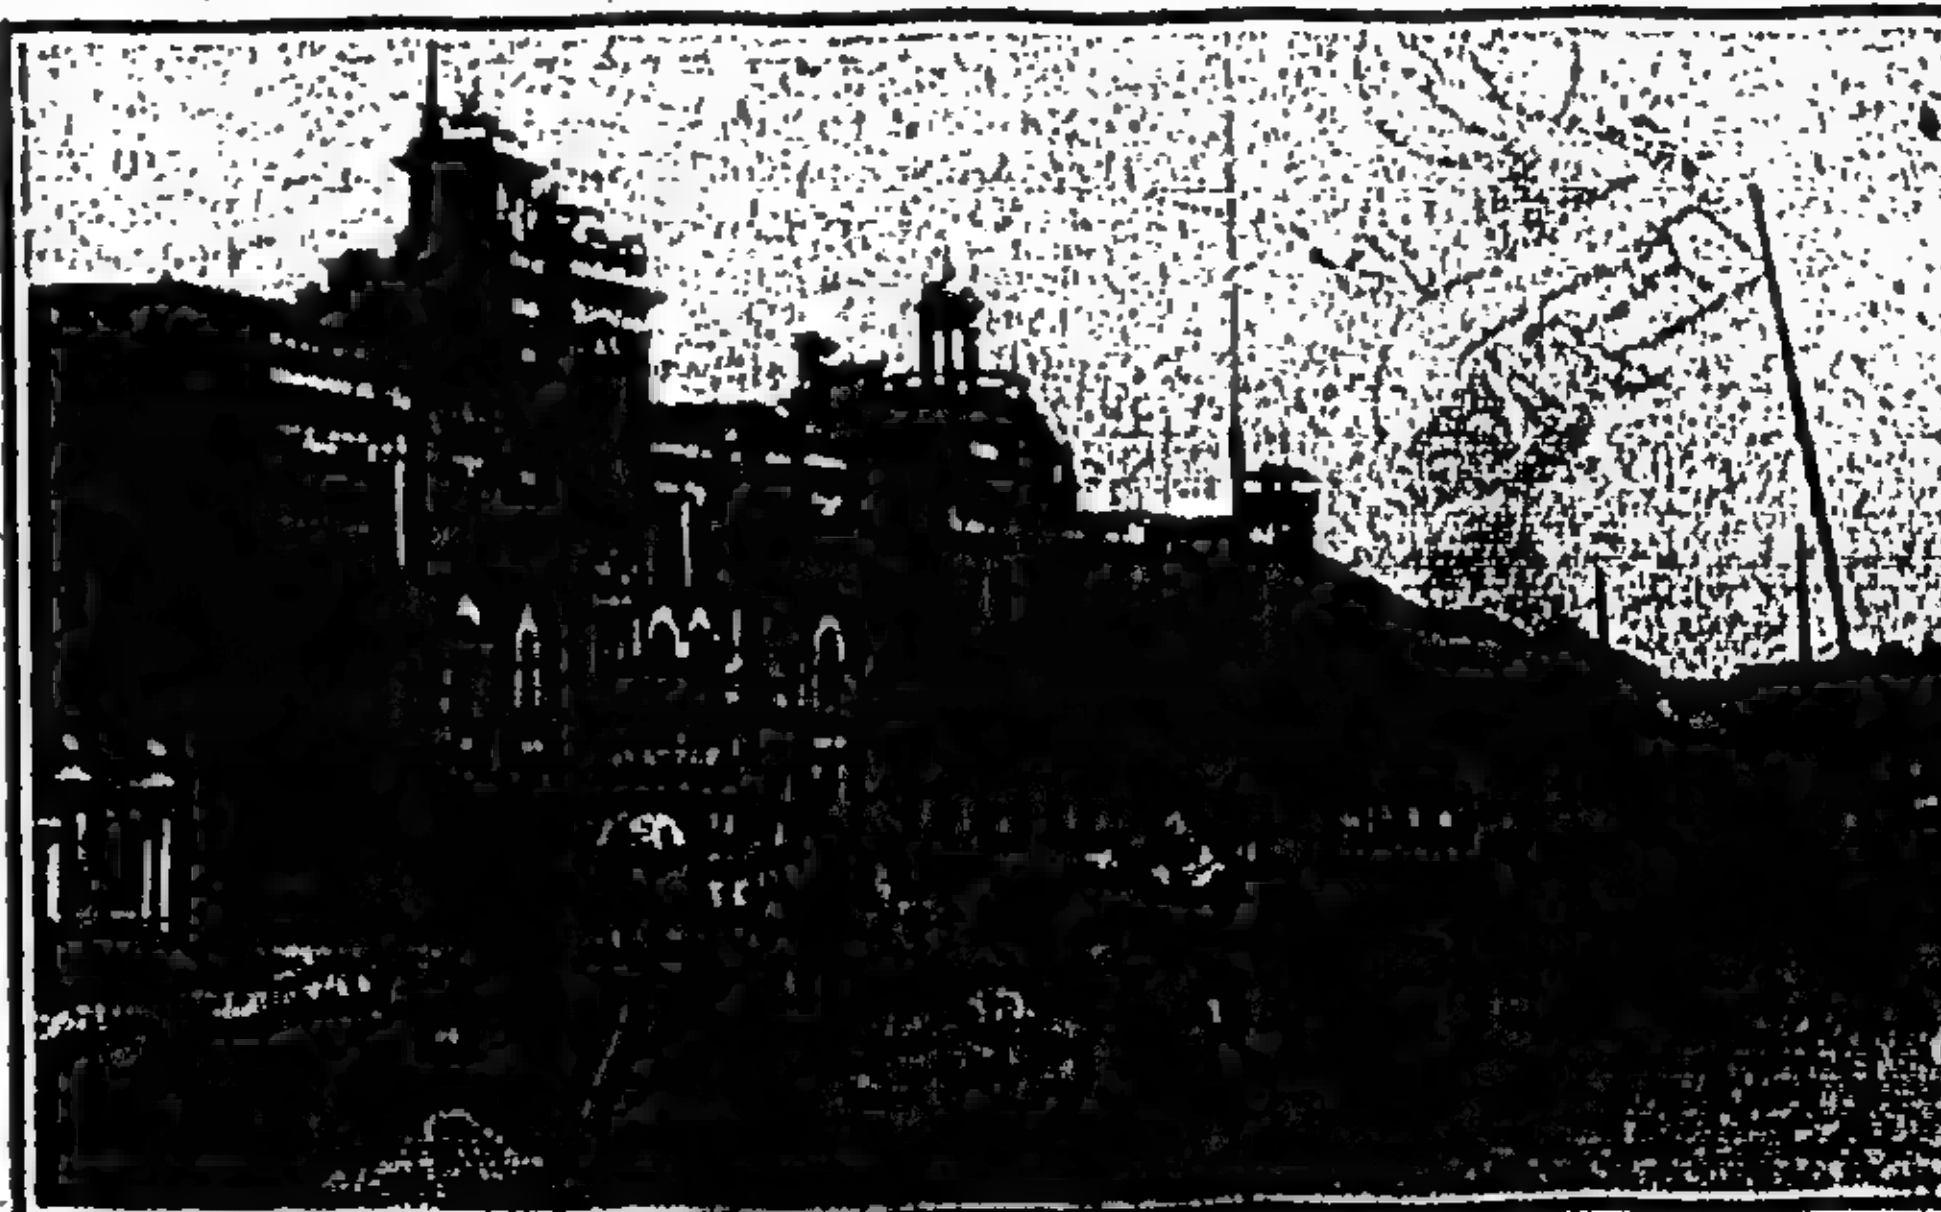

More thrills for air-minded China when Lieutenant Valentino Car, Chief Aero Pilot of the Italian Fiat Company, alights into the cockpit of his Fiat parent ship about three weeks ago and is now in Hangchow demonstrating to the Chinese Aviation officials. Lt. Car won first and second places at the International Air Meet at Zurich, in 1932 with a speed record of 378 kilometres per hour. He will be in China for one week—It is possible Shanghai will have a demonstration.

With the increasing threat of another serious flood in the Hankow area, the authorities have been taking every precaution to prevent the city being inundated to the same extent as during the disastrous floods of 1931. The water reached a dangerous level and feverish operations were undertaken to prevent encroachment over the Bund level. Our photo shows a section of the coolies busily engaged constructing flood walls along the Bund in the Japanese Concession.

The picture shows the installation of the 1931 flood disaster. The water rose close enough to the top of the Bund to give rise to grave fears of serious inundations, but according to latest reports there is no danger as the river shows no sign of rising higher.

PERFECT NOSE FROM IVORY

PLASTIC SURGEON'S ACHIEVEMENT

Philadelphia, P.
 Eminent Ivory from the jungles

 swer to mankind's wish for a perfect

A plastic surgeon whose skill has transformed the faces of some of the ugliest prisoners in the about it in a paper before a hospital staff of surgeons.

He traced the art of nose rebuilding from the time such metals as gold and silver, were used up through the paraffine and

But he declared that ivory is the

ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION IN PLAN

That defendant had misrepresented the true condition of a building was one of the allegations made against Mr. J. S. Gibson, the local architect, when he was summoned before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday afternoon on two counts, (1) misrepresenting the true conditions of Nos. 279 and 281 Reclamation Street, which were under reconstruction, and (2) causing material divergence from the plans submitted to and approved by the Building Authorities.

Mr. L. R. Andrewes, Assistant Crown Solicitor, prosecuted, while Mr. M. K. Lo appeared on behalf of the defendant.

Outlining the case, Mr. Andrewes said the construction of these premises was rendered necessary by a fire which occurred on November 15, 1932, and during that fire No.
 281 was completely gutted, leaving only the wall standing. No. 279, the adjoining house, was also damaged, and on January 10, 1933, plans were submitted for the reconstruction of these premises and they were signed by Mr.
 Gibson.

Various other papers were submitted together with the plans in accordance with the Ordinance.
 The first of these was a stability certificate dated January 9 and signed by Mr. Gibson.

The next relevant document was a form signed by Mr. Gibson and which stated that the plans and calculations submitted to the Building Authorities were prepared under his personal supervision, and that the said plans and calculations conformed in every respect with the reinforced concrete requirements. This document also stated that Mr. Gibson had been engaged to supervise throughout such construction.

When the plans were received by the Building Authorities, they were dealt with in the usual way.
 After an examination of the plans, notice was sent to Mr. Gibson informing him that certain amendments were required.

Mr. Gibson attended the offices of the Building Authorities, took away the plans and finally made the necessary amendments.

Relied on Statements.

The plans were later again submitted to the Building Authorities, and they were approved on February 3, 1933. It was found that the amended plans conformed with the Ordinance and that was why they were approved. The Building Authorities relied on statements made by Mr. Gibson, that parts of the old building would be utilised in the reconstruction of the building, and that he considered these portions to be sound enough. The stability certificate also stated that in Mr. Gibson's opinion, these portions would be structurally sound and capable of supporting the weight of the new building to be erected thereon.

It was essential, went on Mr.
 Andrewes, that these portions of the building must in fact be sound.
 Otherwise the new building would,
 to some extent, rest on unsound foundations.

Mr. F. C. Neville, a Government overseer, visited the site and inspected the building. He found that the fire debris had not been cleared away, and he was unable to make a close examination of the building. He called again on March 16, and he found then that work had begun and he was able to make an inspection of the building operations. He came to the conclusion that the various portions of the wall were in a very unsound state. He reported this to Mr. R.
 J. Vernal, an architect in the P.W.D., and who was his immediate superior.

Walls Defective.

On March 21, Mr. Vernal visited the site and inspected the building, accompanied by Mr. Neville. He found that the walls were defective, they were cracked and were unsound. The brick-work was in a bad state also. He formed the opinion that these defects were caused by the fire which occurred in November, 1932, and that they were present in the walls as from that day.

These defects should have been in the plans which were submitted on January 10, and by reason of their not being shown on these plans, the prosecution submitted, the defendant was guilty of misrepresenting the true condition of the building.

Mr. Andrewes pointed out that by making these misrepresentations, defendant would endanger the new building to possible collapse.

Now Mr. Vernal after calling attention to the poor condition of the walls, ordered all work to stop.

told Mr. Gibson to prepare fresh plans and ordered that the defective portions of the wall be taken down. He communicated all these orders to Mr. Gibson personally, and had several interviews with him in the office and on the site.

Notwithstanding Mr. Vernal's orders, work still continued. No proper plans were submitted and the walls were not taken down.
 Eventually it became necessary for the Government to erect shoring to make the walls safe and secure.

The material divergence was that Mr. Gibson did not adhere to the plans. He erected a new portion of the proposed reconstruction, which he had not disclosed in his plans.

P.W.D. Officer's Evidence.

Giving evidence, Mr. Vernal said he visited this building on the night of the fire last November.
 He saw then that No. 281 was on fire. On January 10, he received plans from Mr. Gibson together with a stability certificate, schedule
 "K," and a R.C.C. schedule. All these were signed by Mr. Gibson with the exception of the schedule
 "K," which was signed by the owners of the building. Witness dealt with the plans in the usual way by office routine, and found that they required one or two minor amendments. He then asked Mr.
 Gibson to call at the office, which he did on February 1. Witness explained what was required, and Mr.
 Gibson then took away the plans.
 They were submitted again with the required amendments, and they were approved on February 3, 1933.

Witness then explained in detail what certain colouring on plans meant, stating that Mr. Gibson by colouring certain portions grey meant that he was using these portions in the construction of a new building. This also meant, witness said, that when an architect re-constructs an old building and proposes to use old work to carry loads he considers this old work to be capable of sustaining such loads.

On about March 16 or 17, Mr.
 Neville made a report to him about the building, and on March 21 he visited the premises and found that Mr. Neville's report was substantially correct. He found that the walls were cracked in various places. Some portions which were marked sound showed cracks, bad brickwork and hollow walls.

Witness attributed the bad condition of the premises to the fire. He said these defects must have been visible immediately after that conflagration. These cracks could be found on the ground, first and second floors.

Portions Pulled Down.

According to the plans submitted, certain walls were to have been left intact, but they were found to have been pulled down, while certain portions which were said to be sound, were found to be cracked.

Mr. Vernal spoke to Mr. Gibson about the discoveries he had made, and told him that further plans would be required. Witness suggested that Mr. Gibson should make an inspection. He also wrote a letter to Mr. Gibson confirming that conversation, and asking that work be stopped. The work was not stopped, however.

On March 30, Mr. Neville reported to witness that work was still in progress, and a few days later witness himself went to the site and discovered for himself that work had not stopped.

On March 29, witness saw further plans from Mr. Gibson but they were not in order. He accordingly returned them to Mr.
 Gibson on April 3. Two days later, Mr. Gibson called at the office, and witness told him that the position was getting serious.

Mr. Gibson stated, however, that he had not seen any of the letters written to him by the Building Authorities drawing his attention to the defects of the premises.
 Witness asked him how he could have sent in amended plans on March 29 if he had not seen the letters, whereupon Mr. Gibson explained that the plans were not prepared by him or in his office, but by people outside. Therefore as the letters referred to work done by people outside, they might have been forwarded to these people.
 Witness warned him that he was the architect and would be held responsible.

On April 8, Mr. Gibson called at witness' office and said work had been stopped. Witness then told him that shoring would have to be put up. Mr. Gibson agreed and said he would have that done.
 Witness saw Mr. Gibson again on April 12 and told him that the shoring he had put up were not sufficient.

Witness had not received any new plans from Mr. Gibson, but had told him that if proper plans were submitted within three weeks he (witness) would be satisfied. If at the expiration of that period, no plans had been received, witness would take legal proceedings. The summons was taken out on June 6.

Mr. Lo reserved his cross-examination of this witness.
 Corroborative evidence was given by Mr. C. C. Neville, who said the hearing was adjourned until today.

CINEMA "SHOTS" & "SEQUENCES"

DOMESTIC DRAMA WITH A WRONG TWIST

GOOD FILM AT KING'S SPOILT BY THE AUTHOR

M.G.M.'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE CINEMA

THE Cinema's interpretation of domestic drama is invariably interesting often amusing and always tantalising. And the last mentioned is the result of a persistent departure from what, up to a point can be accepted as fairly indicative of a phase of life, into sheer melodrama where commonsense, and intelligence gives place to crass stupidity on the part of one or two of the characters. A glaring example is The Painted Woman, current attraction at the King's Theatre.

UP to a certain stage this is real good drama. There is plenty of good acting, snappy action and the promise of a dashed good climax. But instead of allowing the story to progress along normal lines, the author has had to go off at a tangent, introduce an element quite foreign to the earlier theme and finish up with melodrama, where the hero and heroine have no time to listen to sane explanations of a very simple, although delicate, situation. As a result we get an unnecessary trial, an equally unnecessary shooting affair, a death scene and finally a sloppy reunion. It is this reunion, where the characters accept each other on face value simply because of a dying confession, half of which is a lie, and are no nearer the explanation of the cause of their quarrel than prior to the shooting, the trial and the death scene, which makes the latter part of the picture so inconsistent.

PEGGY Shannon is on the rocks and has to make her living in a questionable hotel in Singapore. There she has a scene with a man culminating in her breaking a jug over his head. She prevails on William Boyd to help her to escape on his ship sailing for Australia. On the journey one of the crew is attacked with plague and Peggy is put off on an island off the trade route. There she first meets Irving Pichel a rascally lawyer and Spencer Tracy a go-ahead pecker. She and Tracy marry after Pichel has done his utmost to lure her away. William Boyd returns with his schooner and without knowing each other he and Tracy have a little back-chat in the saloon. Tracy has to visit a neighboring island and Boyd hears he has been double-crossed by Peggy Shannon. So far, so good. In fact the whole thing is put over extremely well. We are led to feel that the climax will be the meeting of Boyd and Tracy in the latter's house and we wait for the moment. We wait in vain. The author prefers another route to the finish. Boyd attempts to kidnap Peggy Shannon and he is stabbed by a faithful servant. Peggy is accused of the crime. Tracy returns to hear a semi-confession of her earlier life and like a true husband, head over heels in love with his wife, decides that she is nothing but a cheat. The servant confesses to the murder, but Tracy refuses even to listen to his wife's story. The servant escapes the gendarmes to explain the position to Tracy and is mortally wounded. An exhausting death scene is followed by that customary old re-union which goes something like this.

The wife: And now my dear I must tell you the true story of my life and how all this happened.

The husband (cutting in): Not a word darling. You are not going to say anything until I have finished telling you, how sorry I am, and that will take me the rest of my life.

Curtain.

But I still think the other ending would have been preferable. A scrap between Tracy and Boyd might not have been quite so dignified as Tracy's exit from the trial court, but it would have been more exciting and certainly in keeping with the earlier atmosphere of the picture.

THERE is some really excellent acting in this picture, although the theme is trite. I have my own private opinion about Hollywood for the manner they exploit such a talented actor as Spencer Tracy, but never mind that. One consolation to his admirers is that no matter the type of vehicle, Tracy is equal to the occasion. He is a brilliant actor and if given the chance he would make a most successful character player. Peggy Shannon plays cleverly opposite him and first rate supporting work is accomplished by William Boyd, Irving Pichel and Herbert Mundin.

THERE is something attractively novel about the present picture at the Queen's Theatre, 70,000 Witnesses. The title is comparatively irrelevant when the picture is viewed in perspective, but it is not a point to worry about. What appeals, I think, is the effort to introduce a new method of committing murder and the reconstruction of the crime which leads to the unmasking of the murderer. A footballer is rubbed by his college doctor with ultra-glycerine, which, after he has made a long and strenuous run, acts on the brain and causes hemorrhage. The solution to the riddle is provided by the game being played over again with the doctor forced to apply the same "dope" to another player and the final denouement of his act.

IN this picture we have some new ideas quite well presented. Additionally some typical acting by David Landau, some first rate work by Charles Ruggie (once again a drunken reporter) and adequate supporting contributions by Dorothy Jordan, Lew Cody and a host of other players go towards the making of an entertaining film. It relies largely on its dramatic situations any mystery, and if the latter is a bit shallow, the action is sufficiently sustained to overcome the deficiency.

YOU CAN SEE THESE TO-DAY.

REACTIONS to the picture Lady With a Past, which in England had to be renamed Reputation because the original title was too suggestive will be varied when it shows at the Central Theatre today. If anybody were to protest that the theme is undesirable, the incidents highly coloured to a point of vulgarity, and the whole picture rather a waste of time, Hollywood would probably reply "This is Life, with a capital 'L'"; this is a truthful pictorial survey of the lives of thousands of men and women today. All of which is undoubtedly true. The only point is, does it help to see some of the nastier truths of life mirrored on the screen? Do we come away from the theatre feeling that we have been entertained? I am not going to attempt to answer the questions here, for as I have said reactions will vary. But whatever one's attitude to the picture, Lady With a Past provides one of those "talking points," so eagerly sought by the late Lord Northcliffe, for his newspapers.

IN this picture we have Constance Bennett as a young society woman, heart-broken because she is unpopular with men. Miss Bennett is then allowed to break nearly every rule of conduct on the ground that the end justifies the means. Its theme is that no girl can be popular with men unless she has been mixed up in some sort of scandal. In pursuit of this unattractive argument we find that the girl who has every young man in New York at her feet is a widow who is believed to have poisoned her husband. In this rather absurd setting Constance Bennett, in the part of the heroine. ("They called me Venice because Mum and Dad spent their honeymoon there"), appears as the only daughter of the most Pilsbury Fatherish blood in New York. The story, which is very long, is told in great detail and with the utmost technical efficiency. The members of a lengthy cast act with a maximum of polish. Nevertheless, I am left with the feeling that this picture should have been

"Notoriety," or better still, "Have you heard this one?" since the main idea seems to be to prepare the way for individual characters to shoot off a dubious variety of so-called wisecracks.

WILL Rogers strikes a refreshing note in a cinema world where polish and speed are so predominant. He picks his leisurely way through his film provoking chuckles and smiles, rather than boisterous laughter, with his steady flow of dry humour and homely philosophising. Too Busy To Work which is the next change at the King's Theatre shows him in a role which fits him perfectly. He is a tramp, who has made laziness something between a fine art and a virtue, who walks the country-side looking for the man who stole his wife and daughter while he was at the war. He finds them, and finding that they are happy, takes to the road again with his identity unrevealed. The slight plot is a perfect vehicle for the expression of the star's personality. There is a fine supporting cast of players, including Marion Nixon and Dick Powell, but the film begins and ends with Will Rogers. There are incidents in his travels—making vain attempts to catch a rabbit for breakfast, or being forced to give up a free ride on a freight train—which are a sheer delight, so adroitly does he extract a witticism or a moral from bad luck. There is another side to the tramp's nature, of course, and Will Rogers shows himself an emotional actor as well as a humorist of the first rank. The pleasant country settings, finely photographed, are only one other feature of the many fine things in Too Busy To Work.

WE owe it to M.G.M. for several innovations in the utilising of the screen for bringing before the public educational and amusing features. It was M.G.M. which gave us the series of Sports Champions by which we saw the world's best tennis players, swimmers, golfers and athletes in entertaining and instructive studies. M.G.M. features themselves invariably justify themselves by the very nature of the subject and the quality of the production. And in this direction the latest feather in the caps of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company is the Microscopic Mysteries feature, the first of which were seen in Hongkong this week.

OF course it is no new thing for the cinema to present nature studies, but in the use of microscopic lens to photograph the studies, M.G.M. have, so far as Hollywood is concerned, presented something new. It is within recollection that several years ago Ufa were making a similar type of film and it was this sort of work, which, although it had an educational aspect as its basis was at the same time distinctly experimental, contributed to the fame of the Ufa producing company as pioneers of modern cinematography.

THE study included in the M.G.M. variety programme at the Queen's Theatre this week was a remarkable example of the possibilities of the screen as medium of art and education. No skillfully written scenario or cleverly acted picture has expressed drama better, if so well, as the grim life and death struggles of the ant world as revealed through the micro-

due to the skilful manipulation of the camera, but the grimness of some of the incidents were relieved by some amusing running commentary. Judged by the expressions of opinion I heard afterwards, Hongkong appreciated this new revelation of the screen and further instalments of this feature will be welcomed.

bed, and the beds were of different sizes and the people of different ages. Their faces were dry like charcoal and their bones thin like wooden boards.

Ting Laan-kat asked for an explanation of all these things. Bluecoat said, "There are many kinds of sin. It is almost impossible to treat them as of one type. The evil of men proceeds from their evil hearts. It is by the mind that one may increase or reduce his evil."

"It may be that in going about during the day when one is busy, one cannot think over these matters very clearly, but at night when lying in bed, when the mind is settled and the eyes are closed and one contemplates things that cannot be fully realised, and the feelings that one cannot anticipate, many things strange and wonderful come into the mind, and all kinds of wickedness and villainy also come forth, in fact, most of the evil schemes originate in bed. Then they can be clearly planned and one may begin cheating in secret, and as they develop the plans they may sleep in peace."

"Toys are found in bed and grief also comes to one in bed."

It sometimes happens that a husband and wife, pillowmates in bed, set one another on to do evil, and unkind conduct often starts in this way, and dissensions among brethren also commence at such times.

As for the others, they each have their own unclean minds and evil plans, so in their case each is on a separate bed.

But in cases that are alike and where sins are similar, whether they be many or few, they are all placed together in one bed.

REALISATION

Extracts taken from the Report of the Realisation Committee, under the 20th January 1933.

The year has been one of increased activity for the Committee.

Mr. W. D. McLaren, M. Inst. C. E., M.I. Struct. E., M.I.N.A., of Vancouver, well-known forestry expert, made a comprehensive inspection and report on Realisation work of N. Z. Perpetual Forests, Ltd.

TRANSPORT:—Definite recommendations for the internal transportation of raw material and manufactured products, have been adopted by the Committee, and active measures taken to acquire all necessary rights of way for the main transportation line. A contract has been let for the survey and construction of 40 miles of steel track forming the line. This work is being pressed forward.

Definite recommendations were also put forward regarding transportation of manufactured goods from the forests to deep water, for export.

PLANT SITES:—Three definite sites have been decided on. All are located definitely on the main transportation line. The necessary land for these sites has already been acquired and sufficient land adjacent for town and village sites.

COST OF PRODUCTION:—Evidence from expert sources shows that we are favorably placed to produce merchandise for which there is a sustained demand, at competitive prices—with a satisfactory margin of profit.

SAMPLE PLOTS:—These are being established to ascertain the volume of softwoods available at any definite time on the whole of the plantations, and the average rate of growth for any period. The methods adopted are approved by the best expert advice obtainable both in New Zealand and abroad.

FINANCE AND GENERAL:—The policy for financing the conversion of the timber into marketable merchandise is now receiving very careful consideration by the Committee.

The above report deals with the Realisation aspect of N.Z. Perpetual Forests, Ltd., business. It shows the soundness of the investment offered by the Company. For further details address

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1933.

THE SHING MUN MALARIA

The true position of affairs regarding the outbreak of malaria at Shing Mun is a matter of public interest. If the menace which is present is not removed, the engineers to be responsible for constructing the Gorge Dam will, plainly, be seriously handicapped and the ultimate cost will be considerably increased. Fortunately, in a way, the danger has early made itself manifest and the active anti-malarial work now being undertaken under the direction of Dr. Jackson, the Government malariologist, and Mr. Bach, an expert with considerable experience of similar problems in Singapore, appears to be sufficiently comprehensive to ensure satisfactory results, although the preventative measures will not reveal their value for some little time. Extensive draining and oiling form the principal features and the success of these efforts will doubtless be judged by the diminution or persistence, as the case may be, of the present outbreak, which appears to have been going on for some time past, although only recently has it become public knowledge, and, consequently, the subject of somewhat startling rumours. Enquiries from various sources resolved these into the information that although the outbreak was serious, the true position could be stated in this wise, that each day over some period of time, from forty to sixty workmen had reported sick and had been compelled to absent themselves as the result of the malaria epidemic, causing a delay in progress, though only slight. Mr. L. W. Innes, the chief assistant to the resident engineer, now writes stating that during June sixty-four cases of malaria were reported and treated, giving an average of two (fresh) cases daily, in several instances these cases including labourers who had suffered an attack of malaria during the earlier part of the month, reporting for further treatment. Mr. Innes desires to correct any impression that may possibly be abroad that scores are being added to the sick list daily. In such circumstances obviously, work would be impossible.

NOTES OF THE DAY

The World Economic Conference suspense is over for the present. Discussions are to go on, though it remains to be seen what good is likely to be achieved. The European gold countries are declining to participate in the work of the monetary committee. Their views on this issue have been crystallised and nothing but a complete volte face will undo the damage of President Roosevelt's initial bluntness. To Mr. Cordell Hull goes the entire credit for saving the Conference. He attacked the attitude of defeatism vigorously and swayed opinion in a brilliantly eloquent speech.

THE BEST POLICY

The circumstances suggest that adjournment of the Conference might still be the better policy. The monetary and the economic problems cannot easily, as President Roosevelt suggests, be separated. It seems futile to discuss tariffs, for instance, while high barriers are being automatically erected by the process of currency depreciation. The gold countries may be in a position to discuss economic problems when they are satisfied that the American dollar has reached the bottom. It would be unreasonable to expect them to commit themselves while one of the principle factors in their calculations remains an unknown quantity.

THE U.S. NAVY VOTE

The American Navy Department is asking for $77,000,000 to modernise and raise the gun elevations of its battleships. At a time when the spirit of the world is being influenced towards disarmament and the reduction of militant forces, such a request appears to be peculiarly out of place. The new American naval policy does not seem to be in harmony with the professed desire for reducing the implements of war. Action such as this will do nothing towards restoring the world's confidence in the aim for peace. The reaction in the Pacific is almost bound to be one of disquietude and may even influence Japan to press harder for a revision of the ratio of vessels agreed upon in the London Naval Treaty. The proposed vote may be part of President Roosevelt's scheme to provide employment, yet surely there are a dozen other more desirable channels into which the money could have been diverted to assist in the effort to relieve unemployment.

POLICE BOMBING

Sir Austen Chamberlain's criticism of the British policy regarding air "police" bombing will be widely endorsed. The contention that under certain circumstances and in certain areas aeroplanes carrying bombs of destruction are the most humane instrument because they prevent the spread of trouble is impressive only when divorced from principle. The fact remains that whether the spreading of trouble is, or is not, prevented, an aerial raid on a village, thrusting death upon innocent persons is displaying remarkable inconsistency. We are not forgetful of the necessity of dealing firmly with the periodically hostile tribes which haunt the Northern borders of India, and the deserts of Iraq. But control of these elements must not be at the expense of innocents, still less of the fundamental principle which the British Government professes to support, that the bombing of civilian populations is a crime against humanity.

THAT LOAN STORY

Persistent rumours that Mr. T. V. Soong has been negotiating a loan in London are now brought to a head by a definite assertion that a prominent London firm of bankers are considering the Finance Minister's overtures favourably. Details are necessarily brief and there is, as yet, no assurance that Mr. Soong's authority is unimpeachable. The question being put to Mr. Chamberlain sounds eminently reasonable however, and it may lead to a statement of British policy. The present time would appear hardly suitable for authorising large foreign loans to a country which is already experiencing difficulties in meeting its obligations.

"A VISIT TO THE INFERNO"

THE FIRST STAGE

CHAPTER IV

As they entered they saw people with heads of cows and faces of horses, who were as cruel as wolves and were beating the sinful spirits, the ghosts of men.

The sinners here were tied up with hempen cords and the demons, who punished them had iron rods like pipe bamboos, about four feet long, with which they beat the sinners from head to foot, and after beating them let them down, and hung up other sinners whom they beat in the same way.

The spirits (ghosts) went without ceasing, and cried out, "We dare not offend any more." "Do not beat us so much." "Please hit with lighter blows." "We have had enough," and such expressions like children being beaten on the ear.

The cattle-headed Hell police said, "You have beaten people a great deal, and it is now our turn to beat you. If you were not beaten you would not know how painful and grievous it is to others to be beaten."

Some of these sinful spirits were women, most of them had been cruel to slave girls and concubines.

Many others were police and cruel people who had extorted money from others. Some, too, were masters who had ill-treated their apprentices, and others teachers who had been cruel to their pupils, and not having a heart of love, they had followed their own evil bent and unjustly punished those under them.

"YOUR HONOUR"

The offenders of different types came in twos. Suddenly a culprit was brought in who was wearing an official hat and official boots, and a long robe, and having a string of beads round his neck. He came stepping forward without any sense of fear.

The lictors took off his clothes and removed his hat and boots, but he kept trying to kick the lictors with his big feet. The lictors were afraid and said, "What is the matter with you? Are you pretending to be mad?"

The prisoner said, "You are mad, you do not know how to distinguish one person from another. You bold villains taking off my clothes. Do you want to rob me?"

All the lictors put their hands to their mouths and laughed at him. He said, "Who do you think I am? I have been a magistrate, and have governed the people, and been called a great man (or 'Your Honour'). Do you think there is any comparison between you and me, you robbers?"

The lictors said, "You were an official, but now you are an offender and a criminal."

The official said, "What offence have I committed?" and the lictors replied, "A short time ago your case was tried before the King of Hades, and it was said that you oppressed and robbed the people much worse than robbers do. Yet you come here and pretend that you know nothing about it, and that you are silly."

One of them said, "Why do you talk to him so much? It is simply a waste of breath, and absolutely useless. The King of Hades has ordered that he be beaten eight hundred strokes to you must just beat him the full number. Why should there be all this talk about it? If an official has been a bad man, he should be beaten with greater severity. Hang him up."

Now this official was fat, and his skin was white. He was fleshy but his bones were small. After he had been beaten a few strokes he cried aloud to heaven, and said in a loud voice, "I will not claim to have been an official. I prefer to confess to being a robber."

"I'd like to know if he's marrying me for my money."

The Very Idea!

WHEN IS WHISKEY BY EDDIE KELLY, SAY WHEN!

WE noticed in the Telegraph the other day that a great dispute is being waged between British and German distillers over the word whiskey.

When, the Telegraph asked, is whiskey not whiskey? We've waited two days for someone to ask us. Now that we are sure that our opinion is not going to be sought, we are going to give it anyway.

Our association with whiskey dates back to the day when we were hit on the head with a bottle by the old man and told to consider ourselves launched. When we were a baby we were bathed every morning in pure alcohol, the hundreds of interested visitors who came to watch the operation afterwards dipping clay pipes into the tub and blowing soap bubbles.

But this was many years ago, before Australia was half civilised through contact with visiting English cricket teams, and half uncivilised through contact with itself.

In those days, a girl who went petting didn't let fools hug them or hugs fool them, and there were no such things as trains or buses. Everyone had to travel by motor-car.

This is called evolution. A Scotch scientist once predicted that the world, finally, would be managed by big lizards walking on their hind legs; and yet they say that Scotsmen are a comparatively dry race.

Whiskey was invented in Scotland, where the water is said to be the purest in the world. They use the water to wash the glasses in.

That's why Scotland is such a cheap place to live in. It only costs sixpence a nobbler back there. We had a Scotch friend who was killed by whiskey. He was out fishing for hake one day and dipped the bait in a mug of whiskey before throwing the line overboard.

The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of "death by being hit in the stomach by a hake."

THE NEW SUIT.

"It is about time you bought yourself a new suit; I am sick and tired of seeing you going around like a bottle. It is positively shameful the way you go to the office and, really—I am ashamed to be seen with you in the street. That shabby old suit of yours—"

"But, dear, it is still a good suit," we said. "Thoreau says that the man who is always getting new clothes is no better than a clothes horse. Now, you wouldn't like us to be a clothes horse, my dear."

"I think you are an ass! Your clothes are a disgrace to your firm. Look at the stains. And the trousers are frayed at the cuffs. And the knees are baggy. You will simply have to get a new suit."

It mattered nothing that the car wasn't paid for and that two instalments on the wireless were owing. We had to have that suit and the wife came with us to see that we got it.

While we were getting measured she said that she would run out and buy some shirts and socks. But when we got out to the car there she was—her arms full of parcels.

"Good heavens, woman," we said. "You have bought enough shirts to last us twenty years."

"But they are not all shirts, darling," she answered sweetly. "Not all shirts?"

ing yourself. I have heard statements made about punishment for the evil thoughts of men's minds."

CHAPTER V.

THE SECOND STAGE

He was then taken on to see the second stage, or grade of Hell, and there he saw hundreds of beds laid crosswise.

Some had thorns laid all over the beds and those who were lying on the beds on their backs had large stones pressing on their chests. The hands and feet of those lying on the beds were also bound so that they could not get up nor free themselves at all.

They were in great pain and groaned day and night without ceasing. Some of them were on separate beds, in some cases two were in one bed, in some cases there were men only and in other cases women only.

WORLD CONFERENCE SAVED—AS A SKELETON Real Situation Little Changed: Gold Bloc Adamant

SURPRISING END TO DEBATE

NEW PROGRAMME TO BE DRAWN UP

LONDON, JULY 6.

CONTRARY TO ALL EXPECTATIONS, THE BUREAU OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE HAS DECIDED THAT THE WORK OF THE CONFERENCE SHALL GO ON.

The decision applies to both the Monetary and Economic Committees, although the gold countries have indicated that they will be unable to participate in the monetary discussions.

The sub-committees have been asked to report upon what work can be discussed with advantage and when these reports are ready, the Bureau will draw up the future agenda.

In effect, the decision means that while the Conference will go on, its work will be considerably restricted in their scope.

London, July 6.

The Bureau sat almost continuously all day long to consider the present state of the work of the conference.

At the close of the afternoon session a communiqué was issued stating that the bureau had unanimously adopted the following resolution, presented by its president Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, after consultations with a number of his colleagues.

FIRMLY DETERMINED.

"Whereas the bureau is firmly determined to proceed with the work of the conference to the utmost possible extent and as rapidly as possible, and whereas on account of the circumstances which have recently arisen, the countries on the gold standard find themselves obliged to declare that for the time being it is impossible for them to take part in any discussion of monetary questions, the Bureau agrees unanimously to first, request each sub-committee to meet as soon as possible to draw up the list of questions which can, in these circumstances, be usefully studied by it, secondly, to meet as soon as the reports of the sub-committees have been received in order to make recommendations as to the arrangements which should be made for the further business of the conference."

MEETING ON MONDAY.

The Bureau will meet again on Monday to receive the reports requested from the sub-committees. It is apparent that Mr. Cordell Hull's eloquent appeal has defeated the gold bloc for the time being.

In the opinion of close observers, however, the real situation remains unchanged and it is obviously impossible for the monetary side of the conference to do useful work in view of the gold bloc abstention.

FUTILE ATTEMPTS.

It must be fairly obvious, too, that the important Economic sub-committees dealing with tariffs subsidies, for instance, cannot function owing to the insistence of the gold bloc that they would be futile until stabilisation has been agreed upon.

The only work possible will be in connexion with commodities like silver, timber, wine and sugar.

Within a few days it seems unlikely that there will be anything but a skeleton left of the great World Economic Conference—Reuter and British Wireless.

PROF. MOLEY LEAVES.

Professor Raymond Moley drove by motor-car to Southampton to embark on the Manhattan to go with his adviser, Mr. Swope.

Replying to a question as to whether Professor Moley would resign as soon as he reached Washington, he said "Certainly not. I do not feel any slight as the result of President Roosevelt's

Mr. Swope emphasised that Professor Moley did not recommend stabilisation. He merely pushed on information.—Reuter.

Heavy Suspense

London, July 6.

Never since the opening day has the Conference building been more animated than this morning when lobbies were congested and crowds of delegates and pressmen were speculating as to what was proceeding in a private meeting of the Bureau which opened at 11 o'clock.

As much ground clearing remains to be accomplished, the suspense may not be definitely lifted until this afternoon.

The outstanding idea at the moment is that a plenary session will be called to-morrow to adjourn the Conference on a definite formula for reassembly within a few months; possibly at Geneva in October.

Further proof that the Conference is as good as over was provided when it became known that the secretariat was preparing to leave Saturday.

Professor Moley and Dr. Swope are leaving to-night, sailing from Plymouth to the United States aboard the s.s. Manhattan.

Sat All Morning.

While anxious groups in the lobbies were discussing and speculating upon the situation, the sixteen countries comprising the Bureau, the Argentine, the United Kingdom, Canada, China, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Mexico, the Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, the United States and Soviet Russia, deliberated all morning long upon the method of adjourning the Conference.

The fateful meeting was held in one of the private rooms allotted to the secretariat. No official statement was available by 1 o'clock, when the Bureau was still sitting, but it leaked out that the suggestion for adjournment was moved by Mr. MacDonald himself, in the capacity of Chairman of the Steering Committee, thus avoiding the placing of the responsibility upon any particular country.

Still Undecided.

Just as it seemed as if the Bureau intended sitting throughout the lunch hour and completing its work in one session, it was announced that the Bureau had risen without reaching a decision.

They will assemble again at 3.30 o'clock to discuss further the method of adjournment.

All the delegates looked very grave as they left the Bureau meeting. M. Bonnet of France shrugged his shoulders, but did not reply when asked his opinion of the prospects. Mr. Bonnet, Prime Minister of Canada, said, "I don't think there is any question of the brightness, or darkness. We have adjourned for lunch and at present there is nothing I can usefully say."

Mr. Bennett's View.

Mr. Bennett, who is fighting for the Dominions against adjournment, asserted emphatically to Reuter that the Conference would

MAN'S ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP GIRL

INTENDED TO SELL HER FOR $6

Sentence of 12 months' hard labour with 20 strokes of the birch was passed on Chung Kee, a Chinese youth, charged before Mr. Butters at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court this morning with kidnapping a girl seven years of age.

It was alleged by Detective Sergeant Points that while the girl was standing in Min Street, Yau-mat, watching a street show at about 7 p.m. on Wednesday defendant led her away using a bottle of candy as a bait. She followed him but when they reached the Kon Chung Theatre, she saw her mother. She cried out and defendant bolted. He ran into Watching Street straight into the arms of a district watchman.

Defendant, it was revealed, had a previous conviction for larceny. He said he was taking the girl over to Hongkong where he had an appointment with a man to sell her for $6.

REVENUE DEPT. IN QUANDARY

TOBACCO SMUGGLERS AND CHILDREN

Charged with possession of two lbs. of Chinese tobacco, five maces of raw opium, and 1½ gallons of Chinese spirits, on all of which duty had been evaded a Chinese described as a seafaring smuggler, was fined $82 or seven weeks, by Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning.

It was stated that defendant on being arrested, immediately furnished bail of $200. Defendant admitted that he employed four small girls to carry bottles of wine from the Kongmoon boats to his cubicle.

R. O. Grimmit—The revenue department are in a quandary as to what to do with these children who carry bottles. We cannot bring these children, most of them under nine years of age, before the Court. It is only a waste of time.

The Magistrate warned the defendant not to employ children.

GAMING HOUSE OWNER FINED

LOTTERY APPARATUS IN COURT

Remanded from yesterday on a charge of keeping a gaming house for po pu lottery at 277 Queen's Road Central, and possession of 416 tickets, valued at $224, an unemployed Chinese was fined $150 or two months by Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning. The full apparatus used in connection with the lottery was produced in Court.

Mr. T.R.K. Kemble, who appeared yesterday for another man, who was discharged, pleaded for leniency. The defendant was employed to write the tickets and when arrested there were several blanks.

On a charge of the possession of 163 po pu tickets, another Chinese was fined $100 or six weeks.

SIKH—CONSTABLE STABBED

ATTACKED BY A SUSPECT

Attempting to search a suspect this morning, a Sikh constable, Sarwan Singh, was injured. The Chinese suddenly drew a knife and stabbed him in the wrist.

The incident occurred on the central waterfront, near the Yaumati ferry wharf, shortly after 3.30 a.m.

The Constable was forced to release the man, who escaped.

At the Government Civil Hospital where the Indian is receiving treatment, it was stated that his condition is not at all serious.

MITCHELL SHINES

BRILLIANT 68 IN GOLF TOURNEY

A CHALLENGE TO HAGEN

London, July 6.

Hagen's wonderful consistent golf coupled with his magnificent start, has made him a strong favourite in the British Open Golf Championship, which is being played at the Royal and Ancient Club, St. Andrew's.

Hagen, who led the field at the end of the first round with a score of 68, was still leading when all the cards for the second round had been turned in.

He displayed very good form, going out in thirty-five and home in thirty-seven.

His lead of two was, however, cut down to one by E. D. Dudley, another American Ryder Cup player, who is offering a formidable challenge to his skipper.

MITCHELL'S EFFORT.

The best golf of the second round, however, was played by Abe Mitchell, the veteran British Ryder Cup player. Mitchell has been looked upon as one of Britain's most brilliant golfers for years past, but his special forte has been match play and he has never yet won the British Open.

To-day, he came into the picture with a magnificent 68. He provided machine-like golf, getting in tremendous accurate drives to simplify his approach problems and seldom requiring more than two on any green.

In consequence of this effort, he occupies third place at the end of the second round.

DUNCAN'S TEN!

Leo Diegel, Henry Cotton, Aubrey Boomer, Johnny Farrell, and Craig Wood all showed a great improvement on their form of the previous day.

Sixty-one of the competitors qualified for the final two rounds of the championship. George Duncan lost his place by an unexpected collapse. He was one under four over the first thirteen holes.

He then took ten strokes before he was able to hole out on the fourteenth!

He pulled himself together and did par figures on the last four holes, but his 78 for the round put him out of the competition, giving him a total of 154.

SARAZEN'S ONE LAPSE.

Gene Sarazen, the holder, looked likely at one time to challenge Hagen for the leadership. He went out in 33, and seemed well set. At the short eleventh, however, he found trouble at all points and finally took a six. His homeward nine cost him forty strokes and he ended up five strokes behind Hagen.

Further evidence of the passing of depression in Australia is supplied by the New South Wales bankruptcy figures.

Last year the number of bankrupts was 418 compared with 557 in 1931 and 659 in 1930. So far this year, there have been fewer than 80, says Austral News. In only five years since 1888 has the figure been lower than last year's.

FUSION OF ALL THE RACES

INEVITABLE IN FUTURE SAYS BIOLOGIST

Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The fusion of all the races of the world in the distant future seems inevitable, says Mr. Goldman, of the United States Biological Survey, in a paper read before the American Society of Mammalogists at Harvard University.

He suggested that the blending of the human races into one would come with the breaking down of barriers of isolation due to improved methods of transportation and other influences overcoming the division of the people.—Reuter.

CHEVROLET ACHIEVES,

For four of the past six years Chevrolet has led the automobile world in sales. And its success is unquestionably due in no small part to the actual achievements in mechanical design and perfection formerly believed impossible in the low-priced field.

In the face of the keenest sort of buying of the last several years, Chevrolet continues in 1933 to lead in sales and the introduction of new features, many exclusive to Chevrolet alone and others expected only in higher priced cars. Among these examples are: the "OCTANE" GASOLINE SELECTOR, NO-DRAFT, CONTROLLED VENTILATION, CUSHIONED POWER AND SAFETY GLASS.

YOUR HEALTH IS PROTECTED.

Draffy ventilation in closed cars is a well recognized source of discomfort and a frequent cause of colds and more serious ailments. All Chevrolet 1933 Model cars now have the protection of the exclusive No-Draft ventilation that gives you an ample supply of pure fresh air at all times without the discomfort and danger from weather and drafts. Can you afford to disregard this protection of your own, and your family's health and comfort in buying a car this year?

U.S. NATIONAL
WEALTHFALLS $115,000,000,000
IN FOUR YEARS

New York.
The national "wealth" of the United States fell $115,000,000,000 from 1929 to 1933 estimates the National Industrial Conference Board.

The national "wealth" in 1932 was put at $247,000,000,000 in 1929 it was $360,000,000,000. National "wealth" means the dollar value of the country's physical assets—land factories and other tangible goods.

Year to year fluctuations do not accurately measure the wealth of the nation in terms of its physical units, but give instead the estimated dollar value of these units according to the prices for they might theoretically have been sold in the different years.—Reuter.

RECAPTURE OF DOLONOR

Peking, June 30.
General Fang Chen-wu, through the mouth of his representative declared to-day that his forces recaptured Dolonor on June 23 and that they were now occupying Kuyuan, between Kalgan and Dolonor.

This report absolutely lacks confirmation, but it is regarded as possible that Dolonor is now in Chinese hands should the report prove true of General Liu Kuei-tang's return to the Chinese fold from Manchukuo.

General Liu has been controlling the Dolonor and Kuyuan area, and if he has really turned over from Manchukuo, then Dolonor passes automatically into Chinese hands but not as a result of General Fang Chen-wu's activities.—Reuter.

"WAR" IN THE BALKANS

LOCUSTS INVADE YUGO-SLAVIA

CHEMICAL WARFARE

Belgrade. "War" has broken out in the Balkan countries—trench and chemical warfare, too. A generalissimo, Professor Mithajlo Gradjevitch, leading an "army" of many thousands, has launched the first great offensive against the hordes of locusts which are invading the Banat region of northern Yugo-Slavia. In the frontier areas this army is to act in concert with the Rumanian and Hungarian authorities, for an alliance against the locusts was formed with them during the winter.

CROPS DESTROYED. With the first breath of spring the eggs of the pest left by the legions which last year destroyed all crops for miles around have begun to hatch out. When the sentries noticed this first appearance of the enemy, word was sent to headquarters and the offensive began.

The land has been divided into areas of 200 acres, one sentry being appointed to watch each area. When the enemy is spotted an attack is launched with chemical preparations fired through powerful sprays. Trenches are also dug around the infected land to prevent the spread of the pest to neighbouring lands. The trenches are filled with soft soap, the most deadly material in the "army's" arsenal.

The first encounters resulted in sweeping successes for the human forces.—Reuter.

"LOT OF SCALLYWAGS."

JUDGE'S COMMENT ON RIVAL LITIGANTS

Mr. M. K. Lo said he had intended to make a submission before his Lordship gave judgment. The Judge: I don't wish to hear you, Mr. Lo. I seldom hear solicitors on the facts, and this is purely a question of fact.

Mr. Lo: I should have thought that the witnesses for the defence were so

COMBATING U.S. RACKETEERS

WAR DECLARED

Chicago, Illinois. The U. S. Government has entered the campaign to purge Chicago of racketeers.

Issuing subpoenas for the appearance of a score of leading business men, contractors and officials of trucking and coal companies, the Federal District Attorney took the first step to obtain convictions against "hoodlums" who have failed to pay income tax on alleged incomes from their "rackets."

The move is the result of a six weeks' investigation in "racket" conditions by officials sent here from Washington to cooperate in the drive against racketeers.

"TELEGRAPH" ART SUPPLEMENT

Amateur Competition Pictures

Numerous pictures of topical interest will be found in the "Telegraph's" Art Supplement to-morrow, although considerable space is given to entries in our amateur photographic competition. Some of the prints submitted are exceptionally good, both in technique and composition.

Seven investigators have been prying into union and trade organizations' affairs.

The immediate objective of government prosecutors who have already met with success in using the income tax weapon against gangsters including "Al" Capone is understood to be the trucking and transportation exchange, alleged to be under control of Murray Humphrey successor to Al Capone as underworld overlord.

Gangsters are said to have levied a tribute on more than a million dollars a year from legitimate coal dealing and trucking interests in the city. Recently a series of terrorists' bombing centred attention on coal trucking racketeers here.—Reuter.

patently untruthful..... The Judge: I have no doubt that both parties are a lot of scallywags.

IMPORTANCE OF BODILY CONTROL

A RACE OF MENTAL GIANTS

Hopes of a new standard of health for future generations are seriously entertained by the organisers of a novel scheme for teaching "bodily control"—conscious control of the use of ourselves—which is now being planned in London.

Certain medical authorities attach such importance to the work that a Trust Fund has been established to perpetuate the teaching. The Earl of Lytton, Sir Lynden Macassey and Dr. Peter Macdonald have consented to act as trustees.

Failure to hold the head, neck and body in the correct relation in our activities is held to be responsible for many physical ills, and it is to correct these faulty "postural reflexes" that the technique is designed. It is the life-work of Mr. F. Matthias Alexander, and was originated 30 years ago.

To-day the starting of a school to teach this technique to children, and the publication of a book, "Health and Education Through Self-Mastery," to convey its principles to the general public, coincide to crown his efforts.

A DEMONSTRATION.

A startling demonstration of the significance of muscular control was given by Mr. Alexander. He was a man, one would have said, of about 55; suddenly he withered as if the weight of another quarter century lay upon his shoulders. There was no question of acting, he neither moved nor spoke, he only shrivelled before the eyes. He lost three inches in height, his spine sagged, his shoulders contracted, his arms hung loosely, he was an octogenarian. It was a most uncanny experience.

The production of a race of mental giants who will not know the ill of our flesh is his aim, and who, by their superior co-ordination, will be able to put right the world, is foreseen by Professor John Dewey, Gifford Lecturer in 1929, when Mr. Alexander's principles are taught from youth up.

Just as perfect co-ordination and the ability to carry out the action one wishes can improve a man's performance at golf, so, Mr. Alexander hopes, will it improve his performance in every other field whether it be finance, politics, or economics.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

Backed by an impressive cast headed by Will Rogers, "Too Busy To Work," the celebrated wit's latest picture opens an engagement at the King's Theatre next Sunday.

The story of "Too Busy To Work" revolves around the adventures of a philosophical and kindly, vagabond and his search for his daughter, whom his unfaithful wife took with her when she ran away with a more aristocratic man while he was away fighting in the war.

He finds her living luxuriously and in love, and rather than make her unhappy by revealing himself to her, he goes on his wandering way, contented by the thought that she is enjoying blessings that he could scarcely provide for her. While Rogers is said to be accorded more than the usual number of chances for witty comments, his role is also highly sympathetic.

Ben Ames Williams wrote the story which was prepared for the screen by Philip Klein and Barry Connors. The picture was directed by John Blystone, dean of directors for Fox Films.

"She Done Him Wrong"

Mae West's first starring picture, "She Done Him Wrong," comes on Sunday to the Queen's Theatre. The picture was written by Mae West. "She Done Him Wrong" is a lusty, roaring melodrama of the Bowery—a hearty tale of the notorious old avenue where men and women are "on the make." Its saloons and its politicians its honky-tonks and its "dames," furnish a background for the activities of the principal characters.

Miss West is cast as "Lady Lou," a famous beer-hall entertainer with a deadly effect on unwary males. Her suitors flock around her, practically in a matter-of-fact fashion. Those who can provide her with the diamonds which are her weakness may enjoy her favours. The others?—too bad.

Into this scene comes Cary Grant, apparently a mission-worker without a diamond to his name. His appearance on the scene leads to a startling, highly dramatic climax, which puts Lady Lou in his arms without the customary tribute in gems.

Miss West sings three songs during the course of the picture the popular old ballad "Frankie and Johnnie," and two new songs, "A Man What Takes His Time" and "Haven't Got No Peace of Mind," which were written for her by Ralph Blasinger, composer of "Makin' Love," "Please," and other popular successes.

In addition to Grant, Noah Berry, Owen Moore, David Landau and Gilbert Roland are in the supporting cast.

"Lady With a Past"

Gay and brilliant, "Lady With a Past," the new attraction at the Central Theatre to-day, is another Constance Bennett starring hit. A modern comedy strongly dashed with romance, it is played against a fashionable background and provides the dazzling blonde star with a perfect vehicle. For the first time in a considerable period, Miss Bennett is not cast as a poor working girl or an erring sister who has fallen and been redeemed by love. She is cast as a wealthy member of a fashionable social set in this RKO Pathe production, and is thoroughly convincing, as well as altogether lovely in the part. One big advantage of the new characterization, which all feminine fans will appreciate, is the opportunity it affords the star of wearing beautiful, modish costumes from the first scene to the last.

Based upon Harriet Henry's latest novel, "Lady With a Past" tells the very human story of a love-hungry girl who cannot attract men because she is shy and more serious than the other beauties in her social set.

"The Painted Woman"

As a copra trader, the three-masted schooner, "Metha Nelson" has covered much of the South Seas in her time. Later as a lumber vessel, and then as a cannery tender, she cruised many more thousands of miles in diminishing glory.

More recently, as the sealer "Ghost," she was an important factor in the Fox Films production of "The Sea Wolf" and then she became the mystery-ship "Dolphin" under George O'Brien's command in "The Seas Beneath."

Now she returns to the copra trade again as the "Southern Cross" with William (Stage) Boyd as her skipper in "The Painted Woman" the exciting South Sea romance which is now playing at the King's Theatre. According to her master, Captain A. L. Laur, who has handled her since the beginning of her film career, the schooner is as sturdy as the day she was launched in 1897 and should play her part in many more seagoing pictures.

Spencer Tracy and Peggy Shannon have the leads in "The Painted Woman."

BANK NOTE FRAUD.

JAVA PASSENGER VICTIM OF FALSE EXCHANGE

Convicted on a charge of feloniously uttering two ten-guilder forged bank-notes of the Government of the Dutch East Indies, in exchange for $40 Foochow currency, Ngai Hak-kau was sentenced to six months' hard labour by Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court yesterday afternoon, when the hearing was concluded. Another defendant, Kong Sau-kwong, who was charged with aiding and abetting, was discharged.

Complainant was a Chinese passenger on the s.s. Tjlsandari en route to the Dutch East Indies. While coming ashore to a boarding house, he met the defendants on a sampan. He invited them to the Empress Hotel where, over coffee, the defendants spoke of exchanging money. Complainant, not having any with him went to the boarding house and returned with $40 in Foochow currency. The first defendant gave him in exchange the two notes and seven silver pieces. Prior to this, defendant asked complainant whether he was going to Java, and he replied in the affirmative.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

If you are to become a successful contract bidder you must set up in your mind an electric sign with the following slogan blazing forth in red letters—"Look for the safety of the hand."

This is what protects you against misfit hands, insures your playing the hand in the right suit or passing at early stages of the bidding even though you do hold a number of high card tricks. The following hand has several interesting bidding angles.

The Bidding.

The proper bidding is as follows: South begins with one heart—the hand is not strong enough for a two bid, as it has more than three losing cards. Holding two major suits the longer suit should be bid first. West passes.

While North has a no trump distribution and has every suit but hearts stopped he is not strong enough to overcall with two no trump and is too strong to bid one no trump. Therefore his best constructive bid is two diamonds. East passes and South now shows his second suit by bidding two spades.

North knows that he and his partner have discovered the safety of the hand and this should be shown immediately by a bid of three spades. They can now bid what they wish, knowing that they can always safely come back to spades. South bids four hearts to show a long solid heart suit with honours and asking North if there is any possible chance of playing the hand at hearts. North should then bid four no trump denying the heart suit and showing strength in the other suits. South should then bid five spades and North will go to six.

The Play

A double by East will make it rather simple for the declarer to make his contract, because West will open the nine of diamonds, and if East has doubled declarer will know that he cannot take the finesse but must go right up with the ace. If there is no double, the declarer may take a chance on the finesse which, of course, will lose and the ace of clubs will be cashed, defeating the contract.

If the declarer goes up with the ace of diamonds he then takes three rounds of trump, starts the heart suit, which will break, discards the three diamonds in dummy, ruffs the ten of diamonds in dummy and loses nothing but the ace of clubs.

ORIGIN OF FIRE UNKNOWN

London, July 6.

The Air Ministry announces that the accident to the "City of Liverpool" air liner which crashed near Dixmude last March, and of which there were no survivors, has been investigated by the Belgian authorities.

They find that the fire broke out in the central portion of the aeroplane, that the theory that the fire originated from the engines is practically impossible, and that while possible causes could be suggested, these are speculations only and the evidence does not admit of any definite cause being ascribed.

The Inspector of Accidents of the British Air Ministry also finds that on the evidence available it is impossible to reach any conclusion as to the actual origin and the cause of the fire which gave rise to the accident.

It seems clear, however, that none of the engines failed or developed any defect, that the fuel tanks did not burst or spring a leak in the air and that while the pipe lines themselves were virtually destroyed, all the pipe connections, nuts and taps were in order. The electrical accumulators had not fired.

The Air Minister is satisfied that nothing could be gained by further enquiry.—British Wireless.

The giant "City of Liverpool" type of plane. Mystery still attaches to the cause of the outbreak which brought the City of Liverpool disaster, and the report of the enquiry will merely serve to revive the stories in circulation at the time that she was deliberately set on fire by one of the occupants.

FORMER POLICE GUARD CHARGED WITH HAVING NO PASSPORT

Sally Ram, a Hongkong Police guard from 1919 to 1923, was charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones this morning with entering the Colony without a valid passport.

A paper was produced, and the magistrate pointed out to the defendant that it was a certificate issued by the British Consul at Shanghai for a voyage to India only.

Det-Sergeant Mottram stated defendant left for India in 1923, and after staying there for eight years, returned to Shanghai. He was too ill to work, and went to the British Consul who issued the certificate to enable him to return to India.

An expulsion order was made on the application of the Police officer who stated they would get defendant back to India or to Shanghai.

ACROSS SOUTH ATLANTIC REIN LORING PLANS DARING FLIGHT

Madrid, July 3.
Fernando Rein y Loring, Spanish aviator who has made two flights from Madrid to Manila, intends to make a solo flight from Seville to Buenos Aires.

He hopes to reach the Argentine in time for the Fiesta Raza. Rein flew to Manila first in 1932 and repeated his feat again this year, demonstrating his ability as a flier.

On his first flight he left Madrid April 24, 1932, and arrived in the Philippines at Aparri, July 10.

Rein made better time on his second flight, leaving March 18, 1933, and arriving April 10 in Manila.

His flight to Buenos Aires will of necessity be a more adventure-some than the one to Manila, due to the long water hop across the South Atlantic.
